PREFACE.

THIS book contains biographical sketches of contemporary divines, celebrated preachers, Christian workers, theological professors, church dignitaries, and editors of prominent religious periodicals. It is intended as a supplement to the Religious Encyclopædia published in 1884, in three volumes. The German Encyclopædia of Herzog excludes living authors.

The value of such a book depends on the extent of its authentic information. In this respect we have been highly favored. When the senior editor resolved, somewhat reluctantly, to undertake the delicate task, he issued a circular letter to distinguished divines of Europe and America, requesting them to furnish for publication exact facts and dates concerning their birth, their education, titles, offices, publications, and other noteworthy incidents. To his great encouragement he received prompt and full replies from nearly all, and takes great pleasure in expressing to them publicly his sincere thanks for their kindness. The information thus obtained is presented without note or comment. Where the gentlemen chose to indicate their theological standpoint in a distinctive way, it is given in their own words; if not, it is left to be inferred from their reputation and works.

To secure still greater exactness, proof was sent for revision to each living person named; and their corrections and additions have been inserted as far as possible.

Additional information and corrections received too late for insertion in the proper place have been printed in the appendix.

When no response was received to the circular, the dates and facts desired were derived from the best attainable sources, chiefly the following: HOLTZMANN and ZÖPFFEL'S Lexikon für Theologie und Kirchenwesen, for German Protestants; SCHÄFLER'S Handlexicon der Katholischen Theologie, for German Roman-Catholics; the thirteenth volume of LICHTENBERGER'S Encyclopédie des sciences religieuses, for French authors; CROCKFORD'S Clerical Directory, and the latest (eleventh) edition of the Men of the Times, for English authors and church dignitaries; denominational cyclopædias, — Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, etc., — manuals, year-books, and catalogues of colleges and theological seminaries, for Americans. The articles thus compiled are marked by a star.

Besides living celebrities, the volume includes notices of divines who have died since the completion of the Religious Encyclopædia (1884), and a few others who were inadvertently omitted.

Simultaneously with this Supplement will be published a new and revised edition of the Religious Encyclopædia, which will embody the corrections made by the authors of the several articles, as well as the editors. Copies were sent to foreign contributors with the request to correct the translation of their articles, and to bring them down to the latest date, which was done.

As to the distribution of labor, the senior editor has procured the material, and written biographical sketches of departed friends (as Drs. Ezra Abbot, Dorner, Lange, Prime, Thiersch), besides aiding in the final revision; while the junior editor has prepared the material for the press, and devoted himself to the work for nearly two years.

The editors have aimed at the greatest possible accuracy and completeness, as well as strict impartiality, in the desire to make a useful and reliable book of reference for readers of all denominations and theological schools.

EXPLANATORY NOTE.

THE general order of arrangement of the sketches is this: Name in full (where initials instead of middle names are given, it is to be understood that the persons had no middle names, but had introduced initials to distinguish their names from others); honorary titles, other than M.A., with their sources and dates in parenthesis; denomination ("Methodist" means Methodist-Episcopal Church North; "Episcopalian" means Protestant-Episcopal Church of the United States; "Presbyterian" means Presbyterian Church in the United States, Northern Assembly; the other divisions which come under these general names are particularly described, e.g., "Methodist Protestant"); places and dates of study and graduation; positions held in chronological order (except when the person held collegiate and clerical positions simultaneously, in which case it has sometimes seemed better to give each class of positions separately); theological standpoint; publications (the place of publication given with the first book is to be understood as that of all subsequent books until another place is given).

The following information respecting abbreviations used in this work, and the various honors, prizes, etc., mentioned, may be acceptable to American readers.

DICTIONARY OF CONTEMPORARY DIVINES.

A.

ABBOT, Ezra, S.T.D. (Harvard, 1872), LL.D. (Yale, 1869, Bowdoin, 1878), Unitarian layman; b. at Jackson, Waldo County, Me., April 28, 1819; d. at Cambridge, Mass., March 21, 1884, and was buried in Mount Auburn Cemetery, near Boston. He was fitted for college at Phillips Academy, at Exeter (N.H.), and graduated at Bowdoin College, Brunswick (Me.), 1840. He then taught school in Maine until 1847, when he removed to Cambridge (Mass.). He taught the high school at Cambridgeport, and also rendered service in the Harvard University and Boston Athenæum libraries. In 1856 he was appointed assistant librarian of Harvard University. His studies had long been given to the Greek New Testament, and in 1872 he became Bussey professor of New-Testament criticism and interpretation in the Harvard Divinity School, and so remained until his death.

He was the recipient of many testimonials to his scholarship. In 1852 he was elected a member of the American Oriental Society, and since 1853 was its recording secretary; and in 1861 a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He was University lecturer on the textual criticism of the New Testament, in 1871. He was one of the original members of the American New-Testament Revision Company. In 1880 he aided in organizing the Society of Biblical Literature and Exegesis. He belonged also to the Harvard Biblical Club. He was tendered the degree of D.D. by the University of Edinburgh at its tercentenary (1884), but died shortly before the date of its celebration.

Dr. Abbot, who bore his name Ezra not in vain, was a scholar of rare talents and attainments, who would have done honor to any nation and any university. He was the first textual critic of the Greek Testament in America, and for microscopic accuracy of biblical scholarship he had no superior in the world. His accuracy was proverbial among his friends. He would have accomplished more if he had been less painstaking in minute details. Hence he has hardly done himself justice in his publications; but the results of his labors have gone into other books, to which he was willing to contribute without regard to reward, being satisfied if only the work was done, no matter by whom. He was the very embodiment of the unselfishness of scholarship. His Literature of the Doctrine of the Future Life, first published as an Appendix to Alger's History of the Doctrine of the Future Life (1864), and afterwards separately, is a model of bibliographical accuracy and completeness, and embraces over fifty-three hundred titles; while Grässe's Bibliotheca Psychologica (1845) contains only ten hundred and twenty-five. He enriched Smith's Bible Dictionary (Am. ed., 1867-70, 4 vols.) with careful bibliographical lists on the most important topics. His most valuable and independent labors, however, were devoted to textual criticism, and are incorporated in Dr. Gregory's Prolegomena to the Ed. viii. critica major of Tischendorf's Greek Testament. He followed the preparation of this work with the deepest interest till his last sickness, but died a few months before the first volume appeared (Leipzig, 1884). The chapter De Versibus (pp. 167-182) is by him, and he read the MS. and proof of all the rest. Dr. Gregory lost in him, as he says, "a constant and proven guide, counsellor, and support." Oscar von Gebhardt, the editor of Tischendorf's latest text, declares Abbot's loss to biblical science irreparable. "We all feel it who labor in the same field." His services to the American Bible-Revision Committee were invaluable. He attended the monthly meetings from 1871 to 1881 most punctually, and was always thoroughly prepared. The critical papers which he prepared on disputed passages, at the request of the N. T. Company, and which were forwarded from time to time to the British Company, were uncommonly thorough, and had no small influence in determining the text finally accepted. As a Unitarian, he differed on some points from his fellow-revisers; but he had the most delicate regard for their convictions, never obtruded his own, sought only the truth, and as his friend and successor, Dr. Thayer, says in his memorial paper adopted by the Committee, "his Christlike temper rendered him a brother beloved, and lends a heavenly lustre to his memory." His defence of the Johannine Authorship of the Fourth Gospel (1880, pp. 104) is an invaluable contribution to the solution of that great question: it is the best within the limits of external evidence, and makes one regret that he did not complete it by the internal evidence, which he thought would require two volumes. Godet (in the third ed. of his Com. on the Gospel of St. John, I. 38) says of Abbot's book: "Ce travail me paraît épuiser la matière. Connaissance complète des discussions modernes, étude approfondie des témoignages du II^e siècle, mesure et netteté dans le jugement, rien n'y manque."

Personally, Dr. Abbot was a kind-hearted, modest, courteous, disinterested, amiable, devout, and conscientious Christian gentleman. From the many testimonials to his worth as a scholar and a man, which are published in a memorial volume by the Alumni of the Harvard Divinity School (Cambridge, 1884), we shall select a few. Ex-President Dr. Woolsey, who was associated with him for ten years in the Bible-Revision Committee: "My acquaintance with him during our revision-work gave me profound respect for him as a man as well as a scholar. He was indeed a most admirable man, and one whom it was a great privilege to know. His kindness to everybody who wanted his help was unsurpassed by that of anybody I ever met with. He has had my full confidence, admiration, and respect beyond most men I ever knew." Dr. Sanday of Oxford: "For clearness, accuracy, and precision of detail, I do not think he can have had a rival on either side of the Atlantic; but it was evident that they were qualities which were moral as well as intellectual. My sense of his loss is compounded of gratitude and admiration, and of the deepest regret that such a career should be closed." Dr. Westcott, Canon of Westminster: "It is the simple truth to say that (as far as I know) no scholar in America was superior to him in exactness of knowledge, breadth of reading, perfection of candor, and devotion to truthfulness of judgment. No eye was keener than his, and no one could be more ready to place all his powers at the service of others with spontaneous generosity."

Dr. Abbot's name will ever occupy an honorable place among the few patient and self-denying scholars who have devoted the strength of their lives to the restoration of the pure text of the New Testament of our Lord and Saviour.

Of his writings, besides those already spoken of, may be mentioned, A Glimpse of Glory (art. in Christian Register, July 27, 1861); edition of Orme's Memoir of the Controversy respecting the Three Heavenly Witnesses, New York, 1866; work upon G. R. Noyes's (posthumous) Translation of the N. T. from the Greek text of Tischendorf, New York, 1869; work upon C. F. Hudson's Greek and English Concordance of the N. T. (furnished appendix and supplementary collation of Tischendorf's ed. VIII., and perfected subsequent editions till 1882); The Late Professor Tischendorf (art. in Unitarian Review, March, 1875); On the reading "an only begotten God," or "God only begotten," John i. 18 (art. in the Unitarian Review, June, 1875, first privately printed for the American Bible-Revision Committee); On the reading "Church of God," Acts xx. 28 (art. in Bibliotheca Sacra, April, 1876, first privately printed for the American Bible-Revision Committee); The New-Testament Text (art. in Sunday-school World, October, 1878, repub. in Anglo-American Bible Revision, New York, 1879); The Gospels in the New Revision (art. in Sunday-school Times, May 28, June 4, June 11, 1881); Bible Text (art. by Tischendorf and von Gebhardt in Herzog, condensed Eng. translation revised and supplemented for the Schaff-Herzog Encyclopædia, New York, 1882); Recent Discussions of Romans ix. 5 (an exhaustive art. on the punctuation of this passage in Journal of the Society of Biblical Literature and Exegesis, June and December, 1883). PHILIP SCHAFF.

ABBOTT, Edwin Abbott, D.D. (by Archbishop of Canterbury, 1872), Church of England; b. in London, Dec. 20, 1838; educated at St. John's College, Cambridge; graduated B.A., 1861 (7th senior optime and senior classic); M.A., 1864; was fellow of his college; assistant master at King Edward's School, Birmingham (1862), then at Clifton College, Bristol, and since 1865 head master of the City of London School. In 1869, and twice subsequently, he was select preacher at Cambridge, and the same at Oxford (1877). In 1876 he was Hulsean lecturer at Cambridge. His theological position is that of the Broad Church School. He goes "beyond many of them in rejecting the miraculous, but does not go with many of them in rejecting what is generally called dualism,—some kind of a recognition of an Evil contending against the Good." His religious publications include Bible Lessons, London, 1871; Good Voices, a Child's Guide to the Bible, 1872; Parables for Children, 1873; Cambridge Sermons, 1875; Through Nature to Christ, 1877; Oxford Sermons, 1879; (in connection with W. G. Rushbrooke, editor of the Synopticon), The Common Tradition of the Synoptic Gospels in the Text of the Revised Version, 1884. He wrote the article Gospels in the 9th ed. of the Encycl. Brit. (1879), and the anonymous religious fictions, Philochristus, Memoirs of a Disciple of Our Lord, 1878; and Onesimus, Memoirs of a Disciple of St. Paul, 1882. Among his other works are, A Shakespearian Grammar, 1869, 2d ed., 1871; an edition of Bacon's Essays, 1876, 2 vols.; Bacon and Essex, 1877; Hints on Home Teaching, 1883, 2d ed. same year; Flatland, a Romance of Many Dimensions, 1884, 2d ed., 1885, republished, Boston, 1885; Francis Bacon, an Account of his Life and Works, 1885; and several instruction-books in English and Latin.

ABBOTT, Lyman, D.D. (New-York University, 1877), Congregationalist; b. at Roxbury, Mass., Dec. 18, 1835; graduated at New-York University, 1853; was for a time partner in his brothers' law-firm, but then studied theology under his uncle, J. S. C. Abbott, and was pastor at Terre Haute, Ind., 1860-65; secretary American Union (Freedmen's) Commission, New York, 1865-68; pastor of the New-England Church, New York, 1866-69; editor of The Illustrated Christian Weekly, 1871-76; and since 1876 of The Christian Union. He is the author of The Results of Emancipation in the United States, New York, 1867; Jesus of Nazareth, 1869, new and illus. ed., 1882; Old-Testament Shadows of New-Testament Truths, 1870; Laicus, or the Experiences of a Layman in a Country Parish, 1872; Commentary upon Matthew and Mark, 1875; Luke, 1877; John, 1879; Acts, 1876; (with J. R. Gilmore), The Gospel History, Complete Life of Christ, 1881; For Family Worship, 1883; Henry Ward Beecher, a Sketch of his Career, 1883. He edited Beecher's Sermons, 1868, 2 vols.; Morning and Evening Exercises (selections from H. W. Beecher), 1871; and (with T. J. Conant) A Dictionary of Religious Knowledge, 1873.

ABBOTT, Thomas Kingsmill, Episcopal Church in Ireland; b. in Dublin, March 26, 1829; educated at Trinity College, Dublin; graduated B.A. (senior moderator, large gold medal in mathematics, and senior moderator in ethics and logic), 1851; M.A., 1855; B.D., 1879. He was Lloyd exhibitioner, 1849; Bishop Law's prizeman (first), 1850; elected fellow, 1854. From 1867 to 1872 he was professor of moral philosophy in Trinity College; since 1875 has been professor of Biblical Greek; and since 1879 also of Hebrew. In the ology he is Broad Church. He is the author of The English Bible, a Plea for Revision, Dublin, 1857, 2d ed., 1871; Sight and Touch, an attempt to disprove the Berkeleyian theory of vision, London, 1864; Kant's Theory of Ethics, translated with memoir, 1873, 3d ed., 1883; Collation of Four MSS. of the Gospels, by Ferrar, edited with introduction, 1877; Codex rescriptus S. Matthaei Dublinensis (Z), Dublin, 1880; Elements of Logic, London, 1883, 2d ed., 1885; Evangelia antehieronymiana ex codice Dublinensi, Dublin, 1884; Kant's Introduction to Logic, translated, London, 1885.

ACHELIS, Ernst Christian, D.D. (hon. Halle, 1882), Reformed; b. at Bremen, Jan. 13, 1838; studied theology at Heidelberg and Halle, 1857-60; became successively assistant preacher at Arsten, near Bremen, 1860; pastor at Hastedt, near Bremen, 1862; pastor at Barmen, 1875; ordinary professor of theology at Marburg, 1882. Besides numerous minor publications, he has issued Die biblischen Thatsachen und die religiöse Bedeutung ihrer Geschichtlichkeit, Gotha, 1869; Dr. Richard Rothe, 1869; Der Krieg im Lichte der Christlichen Moral, Bremen, 1871; Die Bergpredigt nach Matthaeus und Lukas exegetisch und kritisch untersucht, Bielefeld und Leipzig, 1875; Parteiwesen und Evangelium, Barmen, 1878; Die Entstehungszeit von Luther's geistlichen Liedern, Marburg, 1884.

ADAMS, Right Rev. William Forbes, D.D. (University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., 1871), Episcopalian bishop; b. in Ireland, Jan. 2, 1833; came to United States, 1841; ordained priest, 1860; consecrated first missionary bishop of New Mexico and Arizona, 1875; resigned, 1876; became rector at Vicksburg, Miss. *

ADLER, Felix, Ph.D. (Heidelberg, 1873); b. at Alzey, Germany, Aug. 13, 1851; graduated at Columbia College, New-York City, 1870; and at Heidelberg University, 1873. From 1873 to 1876 he was non-resident professor of Oriental languages and literature at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., and since 1876 has been lecturer of the Society for Ethical Culture, New-York City. His "stand-point is not to be classed as theological in a strict sense. His philosophical views are founded on those of Immanuel Kant. He regards ethics as the foundation, and religion as the superstructure. The unity of the world he regards as a necessary idea of the reason, which, however, cannot gather personality about it. Its value consists on the one hand in its regulative application to conduct, on the other hand in its forming the basis for a moral conviction respecting the ultimate good tendencies of the universe." He has published Creed and Deeds (lectures), New York, 1878; and single lectures

ADLER, Hermann, Ph.D. (Leipzig, 1861), Hebrew rabbi; b. at Hanover, May 29, 1839; came to London, 1845; studied at University College, London, and graduated at London University, B. A., 1859; studied subsequently at Prague and Leipzig; became principal of the Jews' College, London, 1863, and chief minister of the Bayswater synagogue, 1864; resigned principalship, 1865, and was theological tutor until 1879; since 1879 has been delegate chief rabbi. He is an Orthodox Jew. Besides many sermons and articles in periodicals, he has published, A Jewish Reply to Colenso, London, 1865; Sermons on the Passages in the Bible adduced by Christian Theologians in Support of their Faith, 1879.

ADLER, Nathan Marcus, Ph.D. (Erlangen, 1826), Orthodox Jew; b. at Hanover, Dec. 14, 1802; graduated at the University of Würzburg; became chief rabbi of the Grand Duchy of Oldenburg, 1829; of the Kingdom of Hanover, 1830; of the United Hebrew congregations of the British Empire, 1845. He was one of the organizers of Jewish schools in London and the provinces; joined Sir Moses Montefiore in appeal for the Holy Land, by which £20,000 were raised; was one of the founders of the "United Synagogue," a federation of the principal synagogues; founder and first president of the Jews' College, London; one of the original members of the committee of the Metropolitan Hospital Sunday Fund. He is the author of many printed sermons in German and English, among which may be mentioned, Die Liebe zum Vaterlande, Hanover, 1838; his Installation Sermon, London, 1845; Sermon on the Day of Humiliation, 1854 ("pronounced by the English press as the most eloquent of those delivered on that occasion"); The Jewish Faith, 1867; The Claims of Deaf-Mutes (which led to the founding of the Jews' Deaf and Dumb Home); The Second Days of the Festivals; and of The Nethina Lager (a Hebrew commentary on the Chaldee paraphrase of the Pentateuch), Wilna, 1874, 2d ed., 1877.

AHLFELD, Johann Friedrich, D.D., Lutheran; b. at Mehringen, Anhalt, Nov. 1, 1810; d. at Leipzig, March 4, 1884. He studied at the University of Halle, 1830-33; became private tutor, 1833; gymnasial teacher at Zerbst, 1834, and rector at Wörlitz, 1837; pastor at Alsleben, 1838; at Halle, 1847; at Leipzig (St. Nicholas' Church), 1851. In early life he was troubled by scepticism; but before beginning his pastoral career he was rid of it, and distinguished himself ever afterwards by the simplicity, clearness, and beauty of his Christian faith. He was one of Germany's most admired preachers, the greatest pulpit orator of the strict Lutherans, and, especially at Leipzig, wielded a powerful influence. To considerable learning he united a knowledge of the human heart, good judgment, ready sympathies, and kindly humor, so that he was the friend and counsellor of all classes, and held by every one in affectionate esteem. His sermons were listened to by throngs, and abounded in apt and beautiful illustration. Besides preaching, he taught in the Leipzig Theological Seminary, and for many years did good service upon the commission to revise the Luther version of the Old Testament. In 1881 he was made pastor emeritus and Geheimer Kirchenrath. Of the numerous collections of his discourses may be mentioned, Predigten über die evangelischen Perikopen, Halle, 1848, 10th ed., 1880; Das Leben im Lichte des Worts Gottes, 1861, 6th ed., 1879; Predigten über die epistolischen Perikopen, 1867, 3d ed., 1877; Confirmationsreden, Leipzig, 1880, 2 series. See his Lebensbild, Halle, 1885. *

ALLIOLI, Joseph Franz, D.D. (Regensburg, 1816), Roman Catholic; b. at Sulzbach, Austria, Aug. 10, 1793; d. at Augsburg, May 22, 1873. After receiving his general training at Sulzbach and Amberg, he studied theology at Landshut, then entered the clerical seminary at Regensburg; was consecrated to the priesthood, Aug. 11, 1816, and shortly afterwards made a Doctor of Divinity. He officiated for short periods as priest, in Grafing, Roding, and Regensburg, but, giving himself up to learned pursuits, studied Oriental languages at Vienna, Rome, and Paris; became successively privat-docent (1821), extraordinary (1823) and then ordinary professor (1824) of the Oriental languages and of biblical exegesis and archæology at Landshut. He went with the University to Munich (1826), and became in 1830 member of the Munich Academy of Sciences, and rector of the university. A throat-affection obliging him to give up teaching, he was in 1835 chosen member of the Cathedral Chapter, Munich, and, in 1838, provost of the cathedral at Augsburg. Active in charitable work, he greatly promoted the Franciscan Female Institute of the Star of Mary. Although an invalid, he wrote many academical addresses, sermons, liturgical treatises, and Hebrew and Arabic poems, besides the following important works: Aphorismen über den Zusammenhang der heiligen Schriften des Alten und Neuen Testaments, Landshut, 1819; Häusliche Alterthümer der Hebräer nebst biblische Geographie, 1821; Biblische Alterthümer, 1825; Leben Jesu, 1840; Handbuch der biblischen Alterthumskunde, 1841-44, 2 vols. (in connection with L. C. Gratz and Haneberg). But by far the greatest of his works was his third edition of H. Braun's annotated German translation from the Vulgate of the entire Bible, Nuremberg, 1830-34, 6 vols. The original work appeared there in 1786, and in a second edition by Michael Feder, 1803, 3 parts. Allioli's edition was such a decided improvement, that his predecessors have been forgotten. It has been repeatedly re-issued, and has the unique honor among German translations of the Bible, of having received the papal sanction.

ALLISON, James, D.D. (Washington and Jefferson College, Pa., 1868), Presbyterian; b. at Pittsburg, Penn., Sept. 27, 1823; graduated at Jefferson College, 1845, and at Western Theological Seminary, Allegheny, Penn., 1848; became pastor at Sewickley, 1849; editor and proprietor of the Presbyterian Banner, Pittsburg, 1864, of which he had been associate editor since 1856. He has been a member of the Presbyterian Board for Freedmen since its organization in 1865, and its treasurer since 1870.

ALLON, Henry, D.D. (Yale College, 1871; St. Andrew's University, 1885), Congregationalist; b. at Welton, near Hull, Yorkshire, Eng., Oct. 13, 1818; graduated at Cheshunt College, Hertfordshire, 1843; and since January, 1844, has been minister of Union Chapel, Islington, London (for the first eight years as associate of the Rev. Thomas Lewis); and in addition, since 1865, editor of the British Quarterly Review. In 1864, and again in the Jubilee Year, 1881, he was chairman of the Congregational Union. In December, 1877, his new church in Compton Terrace, Islington, which had cost £41,466, was opened for service. His congregation numbers nearly two thousand. Although so immersed in pastoral labors, he yet has written much for the periodical press, compiled the Congregational Psalmist, very generally used in his denomination, and published the following volumes: The Life of Rev. James Sherman, London, 1863 (three editions same year); The Vision of God, and other Sermons, 1876, 3d ed., 1877; and edited Thomas Binney's sermons, prefacing a critical sketch, 1875.

ANDERSON, Galusha, S.T.D. (University of Rochester, 1866), L.L.D. (both Rochester and Madison Universities, 1883), Baptist; b. at Bergen, Genesee County, N.Y., March 7, 1832; graduated at University of Rochester (1854), and (Baptist) theological seminary (1856); became pastor at Janesville, Wis., 1856; St. Louis (Second Church), 1858; professor of homiletics, church polity, and pastoral duties in Newton (Mass.) Theological Institution, 1866; pastor in Brooklyn (Strong-place Church), 1873; Chicago (Second Church), 1876; president of University of Chicago, 1878; pastor at Salem, Mass., 1885. From 1880-85 he lectured at Morgan Park (Baptist) Theological Seminary.

He was president of the American Baptist Home

Missionary Society, 1864-66; and of the American Baptist Missionary Union, 1870-72; and in the New-York State Board of Charities (1868-81). He has contributed to the periodical press, and written reports, etc. He was an associate editor of Johnson's Universal Cyclopædia, New York, 1874-76, 4 vols.

ANDREWS, Edward Gayer, D.D. (Genesee College, 1863), LL.D. (Allegheny College, 1881), Methodist bishop; b. at New Hartford, Oneida County, N.Y., Aug. 7, 1825; was licensed to preach, 1844; graduated at Wesleyan University, Conn., 1847; was principal of the Cazenovia Seminary, New York, 1856-64; then a pastor until his election as bishop, 1872.

ANGUS, Joseph, D.D. (Brown University, U.S.A., 1852), Baptist; b. at Bolam, Northumberland, Eng., Jan. 16, 1816; educated at King's College, London, Stepney Baptist College, and Edinburgh University, whence he was graduated M.A. in 1838 after a brilliant course, having taken the first prize in mathematics, in Greek, in logic, and in belles-lettres, the gold medal in ethics and political philosophy, and the students' prize of fifty guineas for the best essay on "The influence of the writings of Lord Bacon." He became successively pastor of the New Park-street Baptist Church, Southwark, London, 1838; co-secretary of the Baptist Missionary Society, 1840; sole secretary, 1842; president of Stepney, now Regent's Park, College, which is affiliated with the University of London, 1849. He has seen the college double in numbers since its removal to Regent's Park, and has recently raised £12,000 for college scholarships, and £30,000 for professors' chairs. He was a member of the first London School Board, and of the New-Testament Revision Company from its organization. He is the author of prize essays on The Voluntary System (1838); On the Advantages of a Classical Education as an Auxiliary to a Commercial Education; Christ our Life (this won the prize for an essay adapted for translation into the vernaculars of India); many articles in the periodical press; of editions of Butler's Analogy and Sermons, and Wayland's Moral Science, and of Bible Handbook, London, 1854; Christian Churches, 1862; Handbook of the English Tongue, 1862; Handbook of English Literature [1865]; Handbook of Specimens of English Literature [1866], new ed., 1880; commentary on Hebrews in Schaff's International Commentary on the N. T., Edinburgh and New York, vol. 3, 1883.

APPLE, Thomas Gilmore, Ph.D. (Lafayette College, Penn., 1866), D.D. (Franklin and Marshall, 1868), Reformed (German); b. near Easton, Penn., Nov. 14, 1829; graduated at Marshall College, Mercersburg, Penn., 1850; after a pastorate in several places, he became in 1865 president of Mercersburg College; in 1871 professor of Church history and New-Testament exegesis in the theological seminary at Lancaster, with which position he has united, since 1877, the presidency of Franklin and Marshall College. He has been a delegate in attendance on every meeting of the General Synod of the Reformed (German) Church since its organization in 1863 (except 1885); a member of the committee that revised the liturgy of the denomination, and of that which restored peace. He was a delegate to the Alliance of the Reformed Churches in 1880 (read paper on The Theology of the Reformed Church) and 1884. He has edited the Reformed Quarterly Review since 1867, and written much for it.

ARGYLL (Duke of). His Grace, George Douglas Campbell, K.T.; b. at Ardencaple Castle, Dumbartonshire, April 30, 1823; succeeded his father April, 1847. He has always been deeply interested in religious questions, and particularly in the affairs of the Church of Scotland. He vindicated that Church's right to legislate for itself, but condemned the Free Church movement. In 1874 he vigorously supported the successful measure in Parliament to transfer patronage in the Church of Scotland from persons to congregations. In politics he has long been numbered among the Liberal peers, and has been a member of the cabinets of the Earl of Aberdeen (1852), Palmerston (1855 and 1859), and Gladstone (1868 and 1880). His publications include, A Letter to the Peers from a Peer's Son, on the Duty and Necessity of Immediate Legislative Interposition in Behalf of the Church of Scotland, as determined by Considerations of Constitutional Law (anonymous), Edinburgh, 1842; A Letter to the Rev. Thomas Chalmers, D.D., on the Present Position of Church Affairs in Scotland, and the Causes which have led to it, 1842; Presbytery examined, London, 1848; The Reign of Law, 1866, 18th ed., 1884; Primerival Man, an Examination of some Recent Speculations, 1869; The Patronage Act of 1874 all that was asked for in 1843, 1874; The Afghan Question, from 1841 to 1873, 1879; The Eastern Question, 1879, 2 vols.; Unity of Nature, 1st and 2d ed., 1884; Geology and the Deluge, Glasgow, 1885.

ARMITAGE, Thomas, D.D. (Georgetown College, Kentucky, 1855), Baptist; b. at Pontefract, Yorkshire, Eng., Aug. 2, 1819; emigrated to America, 1838; from his sixteenth to his twenty-eighth year he was a Methodist preacher, and filled important appointments. Study led him to change his views upon baptism; and he entered the Baptist ministry in 1848, and from that time to this has had one charge in New-York City. He was one of the founders of the American Bible Union (1850), and its president from 1856 to 1875. Besides many miscellaneous issues, he has published, Preaching, its Ideal and Inner Life (lectures delivered before Hamilton, Rochester, and Crozer theological seminaries), Philadelphia, 1880.

ARMSTRONG, George Dodd, D.D. (William and Mary College, Virginia, 1858), Presbyterian (Southern Church); b. at Mendham, Morris County, N.J., Sept. 15, 1813; graduated at College of New Jersey, 1832; and at Union Theological Seminary, Prince Edward County, Va., 1837; became professor of general and agricultural chemistry and geology in Washington College (now Washington and Lee University), Lexington, Va., 1838; pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Norfolk, Va., 1851, and still retains the position. He is the author of The Summer of the Pestilence (a history of the yellow-fever in Norfolk in 1855), Philadelphia, 1856; The "Doctrine of Baptisms," New York, 1857; The Christian Doctrine of Slavery, 1858; The Theology of Christian Experience, 1860; The Sacraments of the New Testament, 1880; The Books of Nature and Revelation collated, 1886.

ARNOLD, Edwin, M.A., b. at Rochester, Eng.,

June 10, 1832; educated at University College, Oxford; graduated B.A., 1854; became assistant master of Edward VI. School, Birmingham; later, principal of the government Sanscrit College at Poona, Bombay Presidency; an editor of the London Daily Telegraph, 1861. He is a fellow of the Royal Asiatic Society, and of the Royal Geographical Society; 2d class of the imperial order of the Medjidie (Turkish), and companion of the Star of India. He arranged George Smith's first expedition, and Stanley's expedition in search of Livingstone, — both in behalf of the Daily Telegraph. He has made numerous poetical translations from Greek and Sanscrit, and has written many poems, of which the most famous are, The Light of Asia (the life and teaching of Buddha), London, 1879 (28th ed., 1886, and several reprints; in recognition he was decorated by the King of Siam with the Order of the White Elephant); Pearls of the Faith, or Islam's Rosary, 1883, 3d ed., 1884; The Secret of Death, 1885. *

H., 1877. He is "in substantial accord with the modified Calvinism of New England, as represented by Andover Seminary in the time of Woods, Stuart, B. B. Edwards, and Park; welcoming all new light, from whatever source, upon the text, composition, or interpretation of the Scriptures, or the doctrines thence legitimately resulting; but resisting all baseless theories, and rash speculations, and, in general, declining to surrender the matured and well-established convictions of the great mass of intelligent evangelical Christians, except on valid evidence." He was the first on the ground to open and organize the Chicago Congregational Theological Seminary, and raised the funds for endowing the chair he occupied. He aided also in the organization of numerous churches in Illinois. He crossed the desert of Et Tih to Palestine (1874) with a view to compare in detail all the circumstances and conditions of the region with the narrative of the journey of the children of Israel. Besides numerous articles in the Bibliotheca Sacra, The New-Englander, The North-American Review, orations at the centennial of the battle of Bennington, the quarter-millennial celebration of Newburyport, and at literary anniversaries, he has written Life and Death Eternal, a Refutation of the Doctrine of Annihilation, Boston, 1866, 2d ed. 1878; *Sketches of the Missions of the A. BEECHER, Charles, Congregationalist; b. at Litchfield, Conn., Oct. 7, 1815; graduated at Bowdoin College, Maine, 1834; and at Lane Seminary, Cincinnati, O., 1837; was Presbyterian pastor at Fort Wayne, Ind., 1844-50; Congregational pastor at Newark, O., 1851-54; and at Georgetown, Mass., 1857-81; stated supply of Presbyterian church at Wysox, Penn., 1885. He believes that "the resurrection of The Christ, both head and members, is a true and proper Return to primeval glory in the celestial fatherland, forfeited, but redeemed by the blood of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." He is the author of The Incarnation, New York, 1849; Review of the Spiritual Manifestations, 1853; David and his Throne, 1855; Redeemer and Redeemed, Boston, 1864; Spiritual Manifestations, 1879; The Eden Tableau, 1880. He was joint editor with John Zundel of the music of the Plymouth Collection of Hymns and Tunes, New York, 1855; and editor of the Autobiography, etc., of his father, Lyman Beecher, 1865, 2 vols.

BEECHER, Edward, D.D. (Marietta College, 1831), Congregationalist; b. at East Hampton, Long Island, N.Y., Aug. 27, 1803; graduated at Yale College, 1822; studied for one year (1825) in Andover Theological Seminary, but did not graduate; was tutor in Yale College, 1825-26; pastor of the Park-street Church, Boston, 1826-30; president of Illinois College, 1830-44; pastor of the Salem-street Church, Boston, 1844-56; senior editor of The Congregationalist, 1849-53; pastor in Galesburg, Ill., 1856-71; professor extraordinary in Congregational Theological Seminary, Chicago, on the Christian organization of society, for some years after 1860. Since 1871 he has resided, without pastoral charge, in Brooklyn, preaching often in various churches.

He is "an evangelical Calvinist, except as to the nature and cause of original sin, and the question of the suffering of God and its influence in the atonement. He holds that sin did not come through the material system, and of course not through the fall of Adam, but that the material system by its analogies is adapted to regenerate those who have made themselves sinful in a previous state of existence. The doctrine of divine suffering he holds as presenting the character of God in its most affecting and powerful aspects, and as essential to a true view of the atonement.

"He went to Alton, Ill., in 1837, to aid in defending the freedom of the press in the case of E. P. Lovejoy. Resisted by the mob spirit, he aided in forming the Illinois State Anti-slavery Society, drew up its constitution and declaration of principles, and published an address to the people of the State. He was with E. P. Lovejoy and Owen Lovejoy, his brother, the night before the former's death, Nov. 6, 1837. He aided in landing the second press, and in storing it in the stone store of Godfrey and Gilman, where in defending it E. P. Lovejoy was slain."

Since 1824, he has published in various religious journals articles on questions of theology and practical reform, amounting in all to many volumes. His books are: On the Kingdom of God, Boston, 1827; History of the Alton Riots, Cincinnati, 1838; Import and Modes of Baptism, New York, 1849; The Conflict of Ages, exposing False Views of the Origin of Sin, False Interpretations on which they are based, the Great Conflict thence originating, and the Means of the Restoration of Harmony, Boston, 1853, 5th ed. 1855; The Concord of Ages: A Defence of the Historical Statements and the Interpretations of The Conflict of Ages, and a more Full Discussion of the Doctrine of the Suffering of God, and its Wide Range of Influence in harmonizing the Church, New York, 1853; The Papal Conspiracy, exposing the Principles and Plans of the Papacy with respect to this Country, Boston, 1855; History of Opinions on the Scriptural Doctrine of Retribution, New York, 1878.

BEECHER, Henry Ward, Congregationalist; b. at Litchfield, Conn., June 24, 1813; graduated at Amherst College, Mass., 1834; and at Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, O., 1837, where his father was professor; became successively pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Lawrenceburg, Ind., 1837; and at Indianapolis, 1839; and of Plymouth Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y., 1847. The latter building seats nearly 3,000, and the membership is (1885) 2,618. Besides preaching, Mr. Beecher has done much lecturing and political speaking, particularly in behalf of various reform movements. From its start in 1858 to 1861, he was a regular contributor to The Independent, a religious weekly of New-York City, and from 1861 to 1863 its editor. From 1870 to 1880, he was editor of the New-York Christian Union, a paper of the same tendency. Mr. Beecher visited Europe in 1863, and courageously defended the side of the Northern States in the Civil War then raging.

On Oct. 10, 1882, he withdrew from the Association to which he belonged, because he did not wish to compromise it by his alleged heresies. The chief points of his divergence from the orthodox position relate to the person of Christ, whom he considers to be the Divine Spirit under the limitations of time, space, and flesh; miracles, which he considers divine uses of natural laws; and future punishment, whose endlessness he denies, inclining to a modification of the annihilation theory. He calls his standpoint "evangelical progressive: anti-Calvinistic."

His sermons have been published weekly since 1859, and in book form in numerous volumes. He says he is the author of "swarms of books — of which I know less than any other person — of all sorts, some thirty to forty." Of these books may be mentioned, Lectures to Young Men, New York, 1850; Star Papers, 1855; Life Thoughts, 1858; Eyes and Ears, 1863; Royal Truths, 1864; Norwood (a novel), 1867; Lecture-room Talks, 1870; Life of Christ, vol. i., 1871; Yale Lectures on Preaching, 1872-74, 3 vols.; A Summer Parish, 1875; Evolution and Religion, 1885. Cf. LYMAN ABBOTT: Henry Ward Beecher, N.Y., 1883.

BEECHER, Thomas Kenicutt, brother of the preceding, Congregationalist; b. at Litchfield, Conn., Feb. 10, 1824; graduated at Illinois College, 1843, under his brother Edward; became school-principal in Philadelphia, 1846, and in Hartford, Conn., 1848; pastor in Brooklyn, N.Y., 1852; in Elmira, 1854. His theological standpoint is "that of the New Testament, Apostles' Creed, and Catholic faith." He is the author of Our Seven Churches, New York, 1870 [a volume of discourses, in a catholic spirit, upon the denominations represented in Elmira], and various articles in periodicals.

In 1845, by presentation of his college, he became vicar of Ware; declined, in 1860, the Regius professorship of modern history at Cambridge; was appointed in 1850 a classical examiner, and in 1875 a member of the senate of the University of London; in 1863, a canon of Canterbury; in 1870, a member of the New-Testament Company of the Bible-revision Committee; and in 1872, dean of Lincoln. He was the author of Thoughts on the Recommendations of the Ecclesiastical Commission, London, 1837; Life of Aristotle, Cambridge, 1839; Conciones academicæ, London, 1843; Four Months in Algeria, 1859; and edited Herodotus, 1852-54, 2 vols. *

BLEDSON, Albert Taylor, LL.D. (Kenyon College, O., and Mississippi University, both 1854), Methodist; b. at Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 9, 1809; d. at Alexandria, Va., Dec. 8, 1877; graduated at the United States Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., 1830; became lieutenant Seventh Infantry; resigned, 1832; became assistant professor of mathematics, Kenyon College, O., 1834; entered ministry of the Episcopal Church, and was rector at Hamilton, O., and professor of mathematics in Miami University, 1835-36; left the ministry, owing to some theological difficulties, and took up the practice of law in Springfield, Ill., and in the Supreme Court at Washington, D.C., 1840-48; became professor of mathematics in the University of Mississippi, 1848, and in the University of Virginia, 1854. On the breaking-out of the civil war he entered the Confederate service as a colonel, but was soon made assistant secretary of war by Mr. Davis. In 1863 he went to England to prepare a work on the constitutional history of the United States. He returned to America in February, 1866, and in 1867 began, at Baltimore, the publication of The Southern Review.

He became a Methodist in 1871, and preached occasionally in Methodist pulpits, but never took charge of a church. His views on theological subjects are difficult to define, as he was not a strict adherent of any church creed. He was a firm believer in, and strenuous advocate of, the doctrine of free-will,—of the responsibility of men for their belief,—a stern opponent of atheism and scepticism. While always friendly towards predestinarians, he fought all his life the doctrine which he believed tarnished the Divine glory, and drove many into unbelief. His views upon these subjects are given in full in his Review of Edwards on the Will, in his Theodicy, and in the pages of The Southern Review. His views on the Constitution are to be found in Liberty and Slavery, and Is Davis a Traitor?

His literary work was done in a manner somewhat peculiar. He pondered his subject long, revolving it year after year; but when he came to write, the work was done with marvellous rapidity and precision, sometimes thirty or forty pages with scarcely an erasure, and then would come a point where he could not write precisely what he wished to say, and perhaps thirty or forty pages more would be thrown aside, each being an attempt to express one unimportant thought. His memory was prodigious for what he read. Of the six hundred and eighty moral philosophers he had read, he could tell, after the lapse of years, just the precise shade of views each upheld. He was an honest but unsparing controversialist, dealing trenchant blows without mercy, but never once in his long militant career accused of misrepresenting the views of an antagonist: though he made bitter enemies by his pen, they were made in open fair fight.

After the intellectual labor of authorship was over, he lost all interest in the financial success of his books. If a strict profit-and-loss account could be made, he probably made nothing by his books, which reached a number of editions: An Examination of Edwards on the Will, Philadelphia, 1845; A Theodicy, or Vindication of Divine Glory, New York, 1853; Liberty and Slavery, Philadelphia, 1857; Philosophy of Mathematics, 1865; Is Davis a Traitor? Baltimore (privately published), 1866.

(Paris, 1881), French Protestant; b. in Paris, Jan. 2, 1842; was graduated bachelor in theology at Strassburg, 1867; pastor at Dordrecht, 1869-72; at Beauvais (Oise), 1872-76; and at St. Denis (Seine), 1877; licentiate in theology, 1878, and instructor in ecclesiastical history in the Protestant faculty of Paris; professor of the same, 1881. He has written Les origines de la Réforme à Beauvais, Paris, 1874; E quibus Netherlandicis fontibus hauserit scriptor libri de Imitatione Christi, 1878; Gérard de Groote, un précurseur de la Réforme au quatorzième siècle, 1878; Les origines du christianisme unitaire chez les Anglais, 1881 (English trans., Early Sources of English Unitarian Christianity, London, 1884); Arnauld de Brescia, un Réformateur au douzième siècle, 1881; La doctrine des douze Apôtres. Essai de traduction, avec un commentaire critique et historique, 1884.

BONNET, Jules, French Protestant, layman; b. at Nîmes, June 30, 1820; educated a lawyer; he has been for many years well known by his works upon Reformation history, and as secretary of the "Société d'histoire du protestantisme français," and editor of its valuable publications. He has published Olympia Morata: épisode de la renaissance en Italie (the thesis by which he won the degree of doctor of letters), 1850, 4th ed. 1865, German trans. 1860; Lettres françaises de Calvin, 1854 (English trans. of his collection of all Calvin's letters, Edinburgh and Philadelphia, 4 vols.); Aonio Paleario, 1863 (English trans. London, 1864); Récits du seizième siècle, 1864; Nouveaux récits du seizième siècle, 1869; La Réforme au château de Saint Prevat, 1873; Notice sur la vie et les écrits de M. Merle d'Aubigné, 1874; Dernier récits du seizième siècle, 1875; edited Mémoires de Claude Parthenay Larchevêque, sieur de Soubise, 1879.

BONWETSCH, Gottlieb Nathanael, D.D. (Bonn, 1881), Evangelical Lutheran; b. at Norka, Russia, Feb. 17 (5), 1848; studied theology at Dorpat, 1866-70; was ordained pastor, 1871; studied at Göttingen, 1874-75; and Bonn, 1877-78; became professor extraordinary of theology at Dorpat, 1882; ordinary professor, 1883. He is the author of Die Schriften Tertullians untersucht, Bonn, 1878; Die Geschichte des Montanismus, Erlangen, 1881; Unser Reformator Martin Luther, Dorpat, 1883; Kyrrill und Methodius, die Lehrer der Slaven, 1885.

BOONE, Right Rev. William Jones, Episcopalian, missionary bishop of Shanghai, China; b. in China, 1847; graduated at Princeton College, 1865, and at the Theological Seminary, Virginia, 1868; and since 1869 has been a missionary in China; consecrated, 1884. *

BOOTH, William, General of the Salvation Army; b. at Nottingham, Eng., April 10, 1829; became a minister of the Methodist New Connection in 1850; resigned in 1861 rather than settle in ordinary circuit work, for which he did not believe himself to be so well adapted as for the evangelistic services which he had held with great success. It was as an independent evangelist that he started "The Christian Mission," in the East End of London, in July, 1865, and out of it developed the military religious organization to which in 1878 he gave the name of "The Salvation Army" (see Encyclopædia, vol. iii. p. 2099). *

BORNEMANN, Friedrich Wilhelm B., Lic. Theol. BROWN, Hugh Stowell, English Baptist; b.

at Douglas, Isle of Man, Aug. 10, 1823; d. at Liverpool, Feb. 24, 1886. He learned surveying, then locomotive engineering, but at twenty-one entered King William's College, Castleton, Isle of Man, in order to fit himself for the ministry of the Established Church. But doubts respecting that Church's position toward the State, and on her baptismal teachings, led him ultimately into the Baptist Church; and at the close of 1847 he began his ministry in the Myrtle-street Chapel, Liverpool, being ordained the following January. He soon took a first place in his denomination, and won particular notice by inaugurating the largely attended Sunday-afternoon lectures for workmen,—an idea which was acted upon in many localities. He visited the United States and Canada in 1872; and was elected chairman of the Baptist Union of the United Kingdom. He has published numerous sermons and lectures. *

BROWN, James Baldwin, B.A., Congregationalist; b. in the Inner Temple, London, Aug. 19, 1820; d. in London, June 23, 1884. He was educated at University College, London, and graduated at the University, 1839; studied law for the next two years, but then obeyed an inner call to the ministry; studied theology at Highbury College; became an Independent minister, first of London Road Chapel, Derby, 1843; three years later (1846), of Claylands Chapel, Clapham Road, London. In 1870 he went with his congregation to the new church they had built at Brixton, and remained their pastor until his death. His ministry was faithful and laborious; his influence was consecrated and wide-spread. His distinctive theological peculiarity was his defence of the doctrine of conditional immortality. The esteem in which his brethren held him is shown by his occupancy of the chair of the Congregational Union in 1878. Besides pamphlets, occasional sermons, newspaper articles, sketches of Rev. Drs. Leifchild (1862) and Raffles (1863), he wrote Studies of First Principles, London, 1849; The Divine Life in Man, 1859, 2d ed. 1860; The Doctrine of the Divine Fatherhood in relation to the Atonement, 1860; The Soul's Exodus and Pilgrimage, 1862, 3d ed. 1866; Aids to the Development of the Divine Life, 1862; Divine Mystery of Peace, 1863; Divine Treatment of Sin, 1864 (the two together under title The Divine Mysteries, 1869); The Home Life in the Light of its Divine Idea, 1866, 5th ed. 1870; Idolatry, Old and New: their Cause and Cure, 1867; Misread Passages of Scripture, 1869, 2d series 1871; The Christian Policy of Life, 1870, 2d ed. 1880; The First Principles of Ecclesiastical Truth: Essays on the Church and Society, 1871; The Sunday Afternoon: Fifty-two Brief Sermons, 1871; Buying and Selling and Getting Gain, 1871; Young Men and Maidens, 1871 (the two together under title Our Morals and Manners, 1872); The Higher Life: its Reality, Experience, and Destiny, 1874, 5th ed. 1878; The Battle and the Burden of Life, 1875; The Doctrine of Annihilation in the Light of the Gospel of Love, 1875, 2d ed. 1878; Church and State, 1876; Home: its Relation to Man and Society, 1883, 3d ed. 1884. Besides numerous sermons, single or collected in volumes, he is the author of Epistola ad Philippenses Paulo auctori vindicata contra Baurium, Leipzig, 1848; Betrachtungen über die Agende der evangelisch-lutherischen Kirche im Königreich Sachsen, 1865; with Luthardt and Kahnis he lectured in the course of lectures afterwards published under the title Die Kirche nach ihrem Ursprung, ihrer Geschichte, ihrer Gegenwart, 1865, 2d ed. 1866 (English trans. by Sophia Taylor, The Church: its Origin, its History, and its Present Position, Edinburgh, 1867). He edited the second and third editions of De Wette's commentary on Peter, Jude, and James, Leipzig, 1853 and 1867; and the fifth edition of his commentary on John, 1863.

BRUSTON, Charles Auguste, French Reformed; b. at Bourdeaux (Drôme) March 6, 1838; graduated at Montauban as bachelor (1859), licentiate (1873), and doctor (1881) of theology, and since 1874 has been professor there of Hebrew and the criticism of the Old Testament. Of his works may be mentioned Les Psaumes traduits de l'hébreu d'après de nouvelles recherches sur le texte original, Paris, 1865; and particularly Histoire critique de la littérature prophétique (from the beginning to the death of Isaiah), 1881.

BRYCE, George, LL.D. (Toronto University, 1884), Canadian Presbyterian; b. at Mount Pleasant, Brant County, Ont., April 22, 1844; graduated at the University of Toronto (1867), and in theology at King's College, Toronto; professor in Manitoba College since 1871, and one of the founders of Manitoba University, 1878; from 1871-81, secretary of home missions for Manitoba; president of Manitoba historical society, 1884-85; and moderator of the first synod of Manitoba and the North-west territories, 1884. He is Délégué Régional de l'Institution ethnographique de Paris (1879), and received a decoration from that body. He is the author of The Presbyterian Church in Canada, Toronto, 1875; Manitoba: its Infancy, Growth, and Present Condition, London, Eng., 1882; and other articles upon Manitoba.

BRYENNIOS, Philotheos, D.D. (Athens, 1880; Edinburgh, 1884), metropolitan of Nicomedia; b. at Constantinople, March 26 (old style), 1833; graduated in 1856 at the "Theological School in Chalce of the Great Church of Christ," and having distinguished himself was then sent to Germany for further study, and attended lectures in Leipzig, Berlin, and Munich. In 1861 he became professor of ecclesiastical history, exegesis, and other studies, in his alma mater; and in 1863, master and director. In December, 1867, he was called to Constantinople to be the head of the "Great School of the Nation" in the Phanar, and so remained until in 1875 he was sent by the Most Holy Synod of Metropolitans and Patriarch to the Bonn Old-Catholic Conference (Aug. 10-16, 1875), and while there received the patriarchal letter announcing his appointment as metropolitan of Serrae in Macedonia, which position he assumed December, 1875. In 1877 he was transferred to the metropolitan see of Nicomedia. In 1880 he went to Bucharest as commissioner of the Eastern Orthodox Patriarchal and other independent churches, to settle the matter of the plundering of Greek monasteries in Moldavia and Wallachia. In 1882, as instructed by the Holy Synod of metropolitans in Constantinople, and the Patriarch Joachim III., he wrote a reply to the encyclical letter of Pope Leo XIII. concerning Cyrillus and Methodius, the Apostles to the Slaves, which was published, with the approbation and at the expense of the Holy Synod, in Constantinople. His fame in the West rests upon his discovery in 1873 of the Jerusalem Manuscript, so called because found in the Jerusalem Monastery of the Most Holy Sepulchre in the Phanar, or Greek portion of Constantinople. This MS. of two hundred and forty small octavo pages contains (1) A Synopsis of the Old and New Testaments in the order of Books by St. Chrysostom; (2) The Epistle of Barnabas; (3) The First Epistle of Clement of Rome to the Corinthians; (4) The Second Epistle of Clement to the Corinthians; (5) The Teaching of the Twelve Apostles; (6) The spurious letter of Mary of Cassoboli; (7) Twelve pseudo-Ignatian Epistles. The Epistles to the Corinthians were published by him with prolegomena and notes in Constantinople, 1875, and at once attracted the attention of scholars, because the text was for the first time entire. "The Teaching of the Twelve Apostles," which Bryennios himself did not at first rightly estimate, is of still greater value both for its age and its contents, being no less than a catechetical church manual from the post-apostolic age. Having discovered its unique importance in 1878, he set to work to prepare a suitable edition of it; and being an erudite patristic scholar he produced it in Constantinople, 1883, with ample notes and prolegomena in Greek. His edition is the basis of the rich literature on the Didaché which has grown up in a short time. See his autobiography which he prepared for Schaff's work on the Didaché, New York, 1885, rev. ed. 1886, pp. 289-296.

BUCHWALD, Georg Apollo, Ph.D., Lic. Theol. New-York City, 1863; bishop of Western New York, 1865. From 1872 to 1874 he was provisional bishop of the church in Haiti, which he visited officially. He was prominent in the formation of the Anglo-Continental Society (1853), and gave it its name. He vigorously and successfully opposed the attempt of the American Bible Society to make slight alterations in the text and punctuation of the Bible issued (see art. BIBLE SOCIETIES, vol. i. p. 263 sq.) and, consistently, also the work of the Revision Committee, but was among the first to advocate the revision of the Prayer Book. He has taken great interest in all that concerns Gallicanism and Anglo-Catholicism. He attended the second Lambeth Conference, 1878. He has written much on behalf of the many interests which have claimed his attention. In collaboration with the late Bishop Wilberforce he began in 1873 the issue of a serial in defence of Anglo-Catholicism as against Romanism. Among his separate publications may be mentioned his volumes of poetry, Advent, a Mystery, New York, 1837; Athwold, 1838; Christian Ballads, 1840; Athanasian, and other Poems, 1842; Halloween, 1844; Saul, a Mystery, 1845. In prose, Sermons on Doctrine and Duty, 1854; Impressions of England, 1856; The Criterion, 1866 (in which he defines his position in the Oxford movement); Moral Reforms, 1869; An Open Letter to Pius IX. (in answer to his brief convoking the Vatican Council), 1869 (widely circulated, and translated into various European languages); L'Épiscopat de l'Occident, Paris, 1872 (widely circulated by the Anglo-Continental Society); Apollos, or the Way of God, New York, 1874; Covenant Prayers, 1875; The Penitential, 1882. He is the editor of the American reprint of Clark's Ante-Nicene Library, Buffalo, 1885-86, 8 vols.

CURCI, Carlo Maria, Roman Catholic; b. at Naples, Sept. 4, 1809; and was educated at Naples and Rome, among the Jesuits. He entered the company Sept. 14, 1826; was expelled Oct. 17, 1877, for having refused to recognize as a Catholic doctrine the necessity of the temporal power of the popes. He has held no dignity, either within or without his order. He taught literature and philosophy in Naples, and has preached in almost all the great cities of Italy, — permanently for six years in Naples, in Rome for twenty years at different times, and in Florence since 1877. He is strictly Catholic, and peculiarly devoted to the Church of Rome, whose doctrines and interests he has for half a century strenuously defended, deploring at the same time its decadence. Of this decadence he saw a symptom and an effect in the attitude of the Vatican towards United Italy, and publicly invoked a reform on this point. This idea of reform, to which he thought the abolition of the temporal power might be an aid, caused him to be expelled from the order of the Jesuits, and persecuted accordingly. His polemical book, La nuova Italia e i vecchi zelanti, 1881, was prohibited by the Congregation of the Index, and to this judgment he submitted himself. His Il Vaticano Regio, turlo superstite della Chiesa Cattolica, 1883, brought upon him an injunction from the Pope, "simply and purely to condemn his book;" and as he, according to the teaching of his conscience, declined to do so, by the order of the Congregation of the Inquisition he was suspended from his sacerdotal functions, and also prohibited from receiving the sacraments. Having declined to obey this order, Leo XIII., in a letter to the archbishop of Florence, lamented his audacity in a general manner, and it was then that Father Curci submitted to the pontiff a general declaration of obedience to the Church, which was sufficient to induce Pope Leo to relieve him from the order of the Inquisition. Notwithstanding this release, Father Curci continues to be persecuted by those of the Catholic clergy who are under the influence of the Jesuits.

In the last half-century there have been few writers among the Catholic clergy who like Father Curci have distinguished themselves by the abundance of their writings. In 1850 he founded, in Naples, the Civiltà Cattolica, a religious and political review, which soon became the organ of the Society of Jesus, and of the Vatican. As the Review upheld the rights of the Pope over kings and emperors, it soon fell under the ban of Ferdinand II., the despot-king of Naples, and Father Curci was forced to remove it to Rome. But the Civiltà Cattolica still pursuing its course, Ferdinand urged upon Pope Pius IX. the necessity of stopping its publication; and as the Pope was reluctant to take this course, the King threatened to expel the Jesuits from his kingdom if his request was not complied with; whereupon the Review was suppressed, and Curci went to Bologna, but only for a year (1855-56), and on the death of the King (1859) he returned to Rome to continue his work. With the beginning of the national movement in 1859, Father Curci seemed to have somewhat changed his opinions, and to have taken a more liberal direction; and as his associates continued to hold the old anti-national doctrines of the Church, he gradually separated himself from the Review, becoming more reconciled with the progress of the times, so far at least as it involved the reconciliation of the Church with the new Kingdom of Italy. He remains, however, entirely devoted to the interests of the Church; and even when he urges the reconciliation of the papacy with Italy, he does so more as a matter of political necessity than as a moral obligation.

The following are the works of Father Curci: La questione romana nell'Assemblea francese, Rome, 1849; La demagogia italiana et il Papa, 1849; La natura e la grazia, 1865, 2 vols.; Lezioni esegetiche e morali sopra i quattro Evangelii, dette in Firenze dal 1 Novembre 1873 al 29 Giugno 1874, Florence, 1874-76, 5 vols. [these lectures attracted a good deal of attention, for in them he expressed his progressive view, e.g., he urged the priests to take part in the elections]; Le virtù domestiche: il libro di Tobia esposto in lezioni, 1877; Il moderno dissidio tra la Chiesa e lo Stato, considerato per occasione di un fatto particolare ("The modern dissension between Church and State, examined on the occurrence of a personal affair"), December, 1877 [it escaped being put upon the Index, was widely circulated in original and translation, e.g., in German, Vienna, 1878, and brought the author before the world as an enlightened priest]; Il Nuovo Testamento volgarizzato ed esposto in note esegetiche e morali, Naples, 1879-80, 3 vols.; La Nuova Italia ed i vecchi zelanti ("The New Italy and the old zealots"), Florence, 1881, German trans., Leipzig, 1882, 2 vols. [in this work, promptly put upon the Index, he attempts to mediate between Church and State in Italy, and to re-organize the parliamentary parties]; Il Salterio volgarizzato dall' Ebreo ed esposto in note esegetiche e morali, Rome, 1883; Il Vaticano Regio, tarlo superstita della Chiesa Cattolica, Florence, 1883; Lo scandalo del Vaticano Regio, 1884; Di un socialismo cristiano nella questione operaia e nel conserto selvaggio degli stati civili, 1885.

[Advanced in the study of the Scriptures more than the common clergy of Italy, he still moves within the narrow limits of Catholic criticism. His mind, logically trained, is more in sympathy with scholastic theology than with modern philosophy. Hence his writings, which are prolix and heavy in style, lack the strength, freshness, and breadth of truly scholarly compositions, and have neither artistic nor scholarly qualities. His biblical works have no originality, but are substantially only repetitions of mediæval notions; and his polemical books have only a personal interest, simply expressing a conscientious protest against old abuses in the Church, which neither in strength nor in influence can be compared with the protests of Arnaldo da Brescia, of Savonarola, and in more modern times, of Gioberti or Rosmini. Yet as an example of a noble self-sacrifice, renouncing the favors of a powerful association, and condemning himself to poverty, rather than bend his knee before the idol of papal temporal authority, Father Curci deserves to be revered by all who hold in honor truth and independence. — V. DABNEY, Robert Lewis, D.D. (Hampden-Sidney College, 1853), LL.D. (do., 1872), Presbyterian (Southern); b. in Louisa County, Va., March 5, 1820; after studying in Hampden-Sidney College, Va., to the beginning of senior year, he entered the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, took the whole M.A. course, then the full theological course in Union Theological Seminary, Va., and graduated in 1846; became missionary in Virginia, 1846; pastor of Tinkling-Spring Church, Augusta County, Va., 1847; professor of church history in the Union Theological Seminary, Va., 1853, and of theology in the same institution, 1869; professor of philosophy, mental, moral, and political, in the State University of Texas, Austin, 1883 (his health requiring a milder climate). From 1858 till 1874 he was co-pastor of the Hampden-Sidney College Church. In 1861 he was a chaplain in the Confederate army, with the Virginia troops; in 1862, chief of staff of the Second Corps under Gen. T. J. Jackson. In 1870 he was moderator of the Southern General Assembly. He has published Memoir of Dr. F. S. Sampson, Richmond, 1854; Life of Gen. Thomas J. Jackson, New York, 1866; Defence of Virginia and the South, 1867; Treatise on Sacred Rhetoric, Richmond, 1870, 3d ed. 1881; Sensualistic Philosophy of the Nineteenth Century examined, New York, 1875; Theology, Dogmatic and Polemic, Richmond, 1874, 3d ed. 1885.

DALE, Robert William, D.D. (Yale, 1877), LL.D. (Glasgow, 1883), Congregationalist; b. in London, Dec. 1, 1829; educated at Spring Hill College, Birmingham (1847-53), graduated M.A. (with gold medal) at the University of London, 1853; and in June of that year was ordained and installed as co-pastor with John Angell James of the Carr's-lane (Congregational) Church, Birmingham, and since Mr. James's death in 1859 sole pastor. In 1869 he was chairman of the Congregational Union of England and Wales. In 1877 he was lecturer at Yale Seminary on the Lyman Beecher foundation. He is governor of King Edward VI.'s School, Birmingham, on appointment of the Senate of the University of London. He takes an active part in religious, political (radical), and educational matters. As for his theology, he is in "general agreement with evangelical theologians, but claims freedom in relation to inspiration of the Scriptures, and differs widely from the traditional evangelical school in principles of criticism and exegesis." His views are most fully set forth in his Epistle to the Ephesians. He "assigns a fundamental position to the relations of the human race to the Eternal Son of God, in whom the race was created. Only by the free consent of the individual man to God's eternal election of him in Christ can he actually realize union with God and the possession of eternal life. The potency of immortality is in the race, and all men survive death and will be judged; but that only those who consent to find the root of their life in Christ will live forever: the rest of the race will sooner or later cease to exist." Besides many articles of importance, addresses separately published, and an edition of Reuss's History of Christian Theology in the Apostolic Age (translated by Annie Harwood, London, 1872-74, 2 vols.), he has issued Life and Letters of the Rev. J. A. James, London, 1861, 5th ed. 1862; The Jewish Temple and the Christian Church, 1865, 7th ed. 1886; Discourses delivered on Special Occasions, 1866; Week-day Sermons, 1867, 4th ed. 1883; The Ten Commandments, 1871, 5th ed. 1885; Protestantism: its Ultimate Principle, 1874, 2d ed. 1875; The Atonement (the Congregational Union lecture for 1875), 1875, 9th ed. 1883 (German trans. from 7th ed., Gotha, 1880, also French trans. and New-York reprint); Nine Lectures on Preaching (Lyman Beecher lectures, referred to above), 1877, 5th ed. 1886; The Evangelical Revival, and other Sermons, 1880, 2d ed. 1881; Epistle to the Ephesians: its Doctrine and Ethics, 1882, 3d ed. 1884; The Laws of Christ for Common Life, 1884, 2d ed. 1885; Manual of Congregational Principles, 1884. He edited The English Hymn-book, Birmingham, 1875, containing 1,260 hymns. For a time he was joint editor of The Eclectic Review, and for seven years sole editor of The Congregationalist.

DALES, John Blakely, D.D. (Franklin College, O., 1853), United Presbyterian; b. at Kortright, Delaware County, N.Y., Aug. 6, 1815; graduated at Union College, Schenectady, N.Y., 1835, and at the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Newburgh, N.Y., 1839; has been pastor of the First Associate Reformed (now Second United) Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Penn., since June 4, 1840, and held the following positions: editor in part of Christian Instructor (1846-79); professor of church history and pastoral theology in Newburgh Theological Seminary (1867-76); moderator of the General Assembly (1867); recording secretary of the Presbyterian Historical Society (Philadelphia) since 1851; corresponding secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the United Presbyterian Church, since its organization in 1859; stated clerk of the United Presbyterian Synod of New York since 1863. He is the author of Roman Catholicism, Philadelphia, 1842; Introduction to Lectures on Odd Fellowship, 1851; The Dangers and Duties of Young Men, 1857; History of the Associate Reformed Church and its Missions (in the Church Memorial), Xenia, O., 1859; A Memorial Discourse on the fortieth anniversary of his pastorate, Philadelphia, 1882; a Church Manual, 1884.

DALTON, Hermann, D.D. (hon., Marburg, 1883), German Reformed; b. at Offenbach, near Frankfurt-am-Main, Aug. 20, 1833 (his father was an Englishman); studied at the universities of Marburg, Berlin, and Heidelberg, 1853-56; has been since 1858 pastor of the German Reformed Church in St. Petersburg, Russia, and member of the ecclesiastical council of the Reformed Church in Russia; since 1876 founder and chairman of the evangelical city mission. Besides these may be mentioned his edifying and devotional writings which are all published in Basel, and have been widely circulated: Der verlorne Sohn, Die Familie (1865, 2d ed. 1870), Die sieben Worte am Kreuze (1871), Bethanien (1875), Die Heilung des Blindgeborenen (1882).

D'ALVIELLA, Count Goblet; b. in Brussels, Aug. 10, 1846; educated at the University of Brussels, 1865-69; became "conseiller provincial" in Brabant, 1872; member of Parliament, 1878; professor of the history of religion in the University of Brussels, 1884. He has received from this university doctorates in political and administrative science 1866, in law 1869, and in philosophy and letters 1884. His theological standpoint is that of "Free Religion." He accompanied the Prince of Wales in India as special correspondent of the Indépendance Belge (1875-76). He has written L'établissement des Cobourg en Portugal, Brussels, 1869; Désarmer ou Déchoir ("ouvrage couronné par la Ligue de la Paix"), Paris, 1871; Sahara et Laponie, 1873, 2d ed. 1876 (English trans. by Mrs. Cashel Hoey, Sahara and Lapland, London, 1874); Le catholicisme libéral aujourd'hui et autrefois, Brussels, 1875; Inde et Himalaya, Paris, 1877, 2d ed. 1880; Partie perdue, 1877; Souvenirs d'un voyage dans l'Atlantique, Verviers, 1881; De la nécessité d'introduire l'histoire des Religions dans notre enseignement public, Brussels, 1882; Harrison contre Spencer, étude sur la valeur religieuse de l'Inconnaissable, Paris, 1884; L'évolution religieuse contemporaine chez les Anglais, les Américains et les Hindous, 1884 (English trans. by Rev. J. Hoden, The Contemporary Evolution of Religious Thought in England, America, and India, New York, 1885). Besides these he has written articles upon the history of religion in the Revue des Deux Mondes, Revue de Belgique, Revue de l'Histoire des Religions, etc.

DAVIDSON, Andrew Bruce, D.D., Free Church of Scotland; b. in Scotland about 1840; received a university education; was ordained in 1863, and the same year was appointed professor of Hebrew and Old-Testament exegesis in New College, Edinburgh, which position he still holds. He was a member of the Old-Testament Company of Revisers. He is the author of A Commentary on Job, Edinburgh, vol. i., 1862; An Introductory Hebrew Grammar, 1874, 4th ed. 1881; The Epistle to the Hebrews, with Introduction and Notes, 1882 (in Clark's Handbooks for Bible Classes); Job, Cambridge, 1884 (in Cambridge Bible for Schools, edited by Dean Perowne).

DAVIDSON, Very Rev. Randall Thomas, dean of Windsor, Church of England; b. in Scotland in the year 1848; educated at Trinity College, Oxford; graduated B.A., 1871. M.A. 1875; ordained deacon 1874, priest 1875; was curate of Dartford, Kent, 1874-77; resident chaplain to Archbishop of Canterbury (both Tait and Benson), 1877-83; examining chaplain to the bishop of Durham, 1881-83; sub-almoner and honorary chaplain to the Queen, 1882; one of the six preachers of Canterbury Cathedral; appointed dean, 1883; Queen's domestic chaplain, 1883.

DAVIDSON, Samuel, D.D. (hon., Halle, 1848), LL.D. (hon., Marischal College, Aberdeen, 1838); b. at Kellswater, near Ballymena, County Antrim, Ireland, Sept. 23, 1807; educated at the Royal Academical Institution, Belfast, completing the course in 1832. From 1835 to 1841, when he resigned, he was professor of biblical criticism at Belfast to the Presbyterian body called the General Synod of Ulster. In 1842 he became professor of biblical literature and ecclesiastical history in the Lancashire Independent College at Manchester. In 1857 he resigned this position in consequence of an adverse vote of the managing committee, apparently founded upon the view of inspiration expressed in the second volume of the tenth edition of Horne's Introduction (see below). Dr. Davidson enjoyed the friendship of Tholuck, Hupfeld, Roediger, Erdmann, Bleek, Lücke, Gieseler, Neander, Ewald, Tischendorf, and other distinguished German theologians. His own theological standpoint is rationalistic. His biblical scholarship is evinced by the following works: (1) Lectures on Biblical Criticism, Edinburgh, 1839; (2) Sacred Hermeneutics, 1843; (3) Gieseler's Compendium of Ecclesiastical History, translated from the German, 1846-47, 2 vols.; (4) Ecclesiastical Polity of the New Testament, London, 1848, 2d ed. 1854; (5) Introduction to the New Testament, 1848, 1849, 1851, 3 vols.; (6) A Treatise on Biblical Criticism (superseding No. 1), Edinburgh, 1852, 2 vols.; (7) The Hebrew Text of the Old Testament revised from Critical Sources, London, 1855; The Text of the Old Testament considered; with a Treatise on Sacred Interpretation, and a brief Introduction to the Old-Testament Books and the Apocrypha (forming vol. 2 of the tenth edition of Horne's Introduction to the Scriptures), 1856, 2d ed. 1859; (8) An Introduction to the Old Testament, critical, historical, and theological, 1862-63, 3 vols.; (9) Fürst's Hebrew and Chaldee Lexicon, translated from the German, 1865, 4th ed. 1871; (10) An Introduction to the New Testament (superseding No. 5), 1868, 2 vols., 2d ed. 1882; (11) On a Fresh Revision of the English Old Testament, 1873; (12) The New Testament, translated from the Critical Text of Von Tischendorf, with an Introduc-

DOEDES, Jacobus Izaac, D.D. (Utrecht, 1841), Reformed; b. at Langerak, Zuid-Holland, Nederland, Nov. 20, 1817; educated at the Latin school of Amsterdam, 1830-34; and at the University of Utrecht, 1834-41; graduated as doctor of theology, June 16, 1841; became preacher in the Reformed Church at Hall, near Zutphen, 1843; at Rotterdam, 1847; professor of theology in the University of Utrecht, 1859. He teaches New-Testament exegesis, hermeneutics, and encyclopædia. He is a theistic and supernaturalistic theologian; and has vigorously opposed the theological school of Groningen, and the so-called "modern theology." In 1843 he received the prize of the Teyler Society, for his essay upon the textual criticism of the New Testament (see below). With Dr. J. J. Van Oosterzee and two other scholars, he issued the Jaarboeken voor Wetenschappelijke Theologie, 1845-57; with Dr. N. Beets and Dr. D. Chantepie de la Saussaye, the Ernst en Vrede. Maandschrift voor de Nederlandsche Hervormde Kerk, 1853 sqq.; and alone, the Evan geliebode (religious weekly), 1849-55; the Kerklijke Bijdragen (essays on church law questions), Harderwijk, 1872, two parts. DOELLINGER, Johann Joseph Ignaz, Ph.D. (hon., Vienna, Marburg, 1873), D.D. (Oxford, 1881), LL.D. (Oxford and Edinburgh, 1873), Old Catholic; b. at Bamberg, Bavaria, Feb. 28, 1799; became chaplain in the diocese of Bamberg, 1822; teacher in the Lyceum at Aschaffenburg, 1823; and since 1826 has been professor of church history in the University of Munich, except from 1847 to 1849, to which position has been added those of Propst of St. Cajetan, Reichsrath, member of the Academy of Sciences, 1835 (president since 1873 on nomination of the king, which makes him chief keeper of the Bavarian scientific collections). He represented the University of Munich in the Bavarian Parliament of 1845 and 1849, and a Bavarian election district in the Frankfort Diet in 1848. After 1848 he gradually became an anti-Ultramontane. In 1857 he made a journey to Rome; and what he saw then, and subsequently learned in the Italian war, 1859, had the effect of confirming him in the views to which his historical studies had brought him. In 1861 he delivered three lectures in Munich, in which he advocated the abandonment by the Pope of all temporal power. The lectures were published as an appendix to Kirche und Kirchen (see list). He obtained world-wide fame by his vigorous attack, before and during the Vatican Council, upon the infallibility dogma. He, with his fellow-professor Johannes Huber, wrote Janus, Leipzig, 1869, and Römische Briefe vom Concil. von Quirinus, originally in the Augsburg Allgemeine Zeitung. When the dogma was passed, he refused to accept it, and was in consequence excommunicated April 17, 1871. On July 29, 1873, he was elected rector of the University of Munich, by a vote of fifty-four to six, nor has his excommunication decreased his popularity in Bavaria. He presided over the Munich Old-Catholic congress (1871), and was at that of Cologne (1872), but has taken no part in the movement, since he opposes the formation of a separate church. He was president of the Bonn Conferences of 1875 and 1876. Among his numerous books may be mentioned, Lehrbuch der Kirchengeschichte, Regensburg, vol. i. 1836, vol. ii. 1st pt. 1838 (English trans. by E. Cox, London, 1839, 2 vols.); Die Reformation, 1846-48, 3 vols., vol. i. 2d ed. 1851; Luther, eine Skizze, Freiburg-im-Breisgau, 1851; Hippolytus u. Kallistus, Regensburg, 1853 (English translation by Alfred Plummer, Edinburgh, 1876); Heidenthum und Judenthum. Vorhalle zur Geschichte des Christenthums, 1857 (English translation, The Gentile and the Jew in the Courts of the Temple of Christ, London, 1862, 2 vols.); Christenthum und Kirche in der Zeit der Grundlegung, 1860, 2d ed. 1868 (English trans., The First Age of Christianity, London, 1866, 2 vols., 3d ed. 1877); Kirche u. Kirchen, Papssthum u. Kirchenstaat, Munich, 1861 (the book referred to above); Die Papstfabeln des Mittelalters, 1863 (English trans. by Alfred Plummer, Fables respecting the Popes in the Middle Ages, London, 1871; with Döllinger's Essay on the Prophetic Spirit, New York, 1872, edited by Prof. H. B. Smith); Vorträge über die Wiedervereinigung der christlichen Kirch., 1872 (English trans., Lectures on the Reunion of the Churches, London and New York, 1872); Sammlung von Urkunden zur Geschichte des Konzils von Trident, Bd. 1., Ungedruckte Berichte und Tagebücher, 1876, 2 parts; and many important essays, addresses, etc. *

DONALDSON, James, LL.D. (Aberdeen University, 1865), layman; b. at Aberdeen, April 26, 1831; graduated at Marischal College, Aberdeen, 1849; studied theology at New College, London, 1849-51; and philology at Berlin, 1851; was successively assistant to professor of Greek in the University of Edinburgh, 1852; rector of the grammar school of Stirling, 1854; classical master in the high school of Edinburgh, 1856; rector, 1866; in Aberdeen University, professor of humanity, 1881; principal of the United College of St. Salvador and St. Leonard, 1886. Author of A Modern Greek Grammar, Edinburgh, 1853; Lyra Græca (Greek anthology), 1854; Critical History of Christian Literature and Doctrine from the Death of the Apostles to the Nicene Council, London, 1864-66, 3 vols., 2d ed. of the 1st vol. under title, The Apostolical Fathers: A Critical Account of their Genuine Writings, and of their Doctrines, 1874; and in connection with Rev. Prof. Dr. Alexander Roberts, edited The Ante-Nicene Christian Library, Edinburgh, 1867-72, 24 vols. reprinted, ed. by Bishop Coxe, Buffalo, 1884-86, 8 vols.; Lectures on the History of Education in Prussia and England, and on Kindred Topics, 1874; Education, 1874; On the Expiatory and Substitutionary Sacrifices of the Greeks, 1875; Elementary Latin Grammar (on entirely new plan), 1880.

DORNER, August Johannes, Ph.D., Lic. Theol. (both Berlin, 1867 and 1869), D.D. (hon., Halle, 1883), Protestant (son of the late I. A. Dorner); b. at Schiltach, Baden, May 13, 1846; studied at Berlin; was repetent in Göttingen, 1870-73; since then has been professor of theology and co-director of the theological seminary at Wittenberg. He is the author of De Baconis philosophia, Berlin, 1867; Augustinus, sein theologisches System und seine religions-philosoph. Anschauung, 1873; Predigten vom Reiche Gottes, 1880; Kirche u. Reich Gottes, 1883, besides minor publications and review articles.

DORNER, Isaac August, D.D., one of the greatest modern divines and teachers of Germany; b. at Neuhausen, in the kingdom of Württemberg, June 20, 1809; d. at Wiesbaden, July 8, 1884; buried, July 27, in the family vault at Neuhausen, where a plain monument is erected to his memory. He was the sixth of twelve children born to the pastor of Neuhausen, and was educated first by a private tutor, then in the Latin school at Tuttlingen. In 1823 he entered the collegiate seminary at Maulbronn; in 1827, the University of Tübingen, where he studied philosophy and theology. He visited England and North Germany. In 1834 he became repetent (teaching tutor, or fellow, in the theological department of the university), having two years previous acted as assistant to his father; and in 1837, professor extraordinary of theology in Tübingen. In 1835 David Friedrich Strauss, a colleague of Dorner, published his Life of Jesus, and Dorner issued the first pages of his work of directly opposite tendency, History of the Development of the Doctrine of the Person of Christ, in which the historical Christ of the Gospels is traced through the ages of the Church as the greatest fact in Christian thought and experience. His teacher, Christian Friedrich Schmid, had incited him to take up the work, into which he put his thought and study until its completion in 1839. This work determined Dorner's place among theologians and doctrinal historians, and was a most effectual, though indirect, answer to Strauss and his mythical theory. The work was afterwards greatly enlarged and improved by an exhaustive study of the sources from the apostolic age down to the recent Kenosis controversy. In 1839 he was called to the University of Kiel as ordinary professor, and there remained until 1843. He formed an intimate friendship with Bishop Martensen, the greatest theologian of Denmark; and even the Schleswig-Holstein difficulty did not disturb it. His principal writing during his Kiel residence is his dogmatic treatise upon the Foundation Ideas of the Protestant Church, in which he maintained that the so-called material and formal principles of the Reformation — i.e., justification by faith, and the supreme authority of Scripture, respectively — were to be considered as two pillars inseparably joined, so that each stands with and through the other. This was his word of comfort to those distressed by Strauss: No criticism can alter the fact that the primitive Church did record in the New Testament, by means of the Spirit proceeding from Christ, its impressions and experiences of Christ's salvation. On the other hand, faith holds fast to the written word. For the Christ whom faith experiences is the Christ of Scripture, which alone enables the Christian to understand and assert faith and the mystery of his new personality. Justification, he used to say, is the only completed fact in the Christian: every thing else is growth.

In 1843 he became professor of theology at Königsberg, in 1847 at Bonn, in 1853 at Göttingen, and finally in 1862 at Berlin. Here, besides being professor in the university, he was superior consistorial councillor (Oberkirchenrath), and from here for twenty-two years he exerted a quiet but mighty influence on the Evangelical Church of Prussia, and on students from all parts of the world.

In 1873 he visited, with his son August, the United States, as a delegate to the Sixth General Conference of the Evangelical Alliance in New York, and read a thoughtful paper on the Infallibility of the Vatican Council, which is published in the Proceedings, New York, pp. 427-436. He travelled in New England, and as far south as Washington, and was deeply impressed with the religious and literary activity of America. He carried back with him the most favorable recollections, and heartily welcomed American students in his hospitable home. The last years of his life were clouded by a painful cancerous affection of his face, and the incurable malady of one of his sons, a promising youth, who lost his mind while studying at college. He bore his trial with meek resignation, and never complained. He continued to work on his Christian Ethics till the last weeks of his life, which he spent at Wittenberg, in view of the Luther house. Then, feeble as he was, he set out with his wife on a journey to Switzerland for rest, and proposed visiting, on the way, the national monument of Germania on the Niederwald, by the Rhine; but was seized with a hemorrhage, and died suddenly at Wiesbaden. His wife followed him a few months afterwards to his eternal rest.

Dr. Dörner was one of the profoundest and most learned theologians of the nineteenth century, and ranks with Schleiermacher, Neander, Nitzsch, Julius Müller, and Richard Rothe. He mastered the theology of Schleiermacher and the philosophy of Hegel, appropriated the best elements of both, infused into them a positive evangelical faith and a historical spirit. The central idea of his system was the divine-human personality of Christ, as the highest revealer of God, the perfect ideal of humanity, and the Saviour from sin and death. His theology is pre-eminently christological, and his monumental history of christology will long remain the richest mine of study in that department. He lectured on exegesis, on New-Testament theology, on symbolics, and especially on dogmatics and ethics, in which he excelled all his contemporaries. He was one of the revisers of the Luther Bible, and proposed a correspondence with the Anglo-American Revision Committee, while in New York, 1873, which was carried on for a short time. He was alive to all the practical church questions, and labored in the Oberkirchenrath for synodical church government, and the development of the lay agency and the voluntary principle. He had a deep interest in the work of "inner missions," and was one of its directors.

He was, with Wichern and von Bethmann-Hollweg, one of the founders of the German Church Diet, in the revolutionary year 1848, and one of the leading speakers and managers at its annual sessions. His catholicity went beyond the limits of the German churches, and was in full sympathy with the principles and aims of the International Evangelical Alliance. He was a most devoted and conscientious teacher, and a favorite among students. The Johanneum and the Melancthon House in Berlin are memorials of his active interest in indigent students. The leading traits in his personal character were purity, simplicity, courtesy, gentleness, humility, and love. Decan Jäger and Diaconus Knapp paid noble testimonies to his virtues, at the funeral (Zur Erinnerung an Dr. Isaak August Dörner, Tuttingen, 1884); and Dr. Kleinert, as dean of the theological faculty, delivered a eulogy before the University of Berlin, July 26, 1884 (Zum Gedächtniss I. A. D.'s, Berlin, 1884), in which he places him next to Schleiermacher, and calls him "a leader and prophet in the highest questions of theology;" adding, that, "great as were his merits in theological science, the noblest thing in him was his personality, which reflected the image of Christ, and impressed itself indelibly on all who knew him." His son has given a good account of his theological system in Dem Andenken von Dr. I. A. Dörner von Dr. Dörner, Prof. in Wittenberg, Gotha, 1885.

The following is a list of Dörner's publications: Entwicklungsgeschichte der Lehre von der Person Christi von den ältesten Zeiten bis auf die neueste dargestellt, Stuttgart, 1839; 2d ed., more than doubled in size, 1st part, Die Lehre von der Person Christi in den ersten vier Jahrhunderten, Stuttgart, 1845; 2d part, Die Lehre von der Person Christi vom Ende des vierten Jahrhunderts bis zur Gegenwart, 3 divisions (bis zur Reformation, 1853; in dem Reformationszeitalter, 1854; bis zur Gegenwart, 1856), Berlin, 1853-56 (English trans., by W. DOUGLAS, George, LL.D. (McGill University, Montreal, 1869), D.D. (Victoria University, Ontario, 1881), Wesleyan Methodist; b. near Abbotsford, Roxburghshire, Scotland, Oct. 14, 1825; educated in Scotland and Canada; entered the ministry of British Conference, 1848; went as missionary to the West Indies, 1848; entered Methodist Church of Canada, 1854; has been principal of the Wesleyan Theological College, Montreal, since its foundation in 1873. He was president of the General Conference, 1878-82; delegate to Evangelical Alliance Conference in New-York City, 1873, and the Œcumenical Council of Methodism in London, 1881. He has published various sermons and addresses.

DOUGLAS, George Cunningham Monteath, D.D. (University of Glasgow, 1867), Free Church of Scotland; b. at Kilbarchan, Renfrewshire, Scotland, March 2, 1826; graduated B.A. at the University of Glasgow; entered the ministry of the Free Church; and after being pastor at Bridge of Weir, Renfrewshire (1852-57), he was appointed professor of Hebrew and Old-Testament exegesis, later also principal, in the Free Church College, Glasgow. He was one of the Old-Testament revisers, 1870-84. Besides articles in Fairbairn's Imperial Bible Dictionary (London, 1866, 2 vols.), and in The Monthly Interpreter (Edinburgh, 1885, sqq.), and a translation with notes of Keil's Introduction to the Old Testament, in Clark's Library (1869-70, 2 vols.), he has published, Why I still believe that Moses wrote Deuteronomy, 1878; and notes on Judges and Joshua, in Dods and Whyte's Handbook for Bible Classes, 1881, 1882.

DOW, Neal, layman; b. of Quaker parents at Portland, Me., March 20, 1804; educated at Friends' Academy, New Bedford, Mass.; was chief engineer of the Portland Fire Department 1839-44, mayor of the city 1851-54; and in 1851 drew up the bill "for the suppression of drinking-houses and tipping-shops," since widely known as the "Maine Law." He presented it in a public hearing before the committee of the legislature, "which unanimously adopted it, without change. It was printed during the night; and the next day, Saturday, May 31, 1851, being the last day of the session, it was passed without change through all its stages; and on Monday, June 2, it was approved by the governor, and took effect by special provision from that day." It has since been upheld as the settled policy of the State. He was subsequently, for two terms, a member of the Maine Legislature, 1858-59. "In September, 1884, by a popular vote, the prohibition of the liquor-traffic was incorporated into the Constitution of the State by a very large majority, the affirmative vote being nearly three times larger than the negative." He has been three times in Great Britain as the guest of the United-Kingdom Alliance, the largest and most influential temperance society in the world, and has advocated the cause in all parts of the kingdom. He was commissioned by Gov. Washburn colonel of the Thirtieth Maine Volunteers in September, 1861; went immediately to the Department of the Gulf, where he had three separate commands at different times, having been commissioned brigadier-general by President Lincoln soon after his arrival at the Gulf of Mexico, April, 1862. He was twice wounded at Port Hudson, and, being taken to a plantation-house in the rear of the army, was captured in the night by a detachment of Logan's cavalry (June 30, 1863), and was taken by many successive stages to Richmond, Va., where he was confined six months in Libby Prison. He was also confined two months at Mobile, being exchanged afterwards for Fitz Henry Lee, March 14, 1864. His health was so far broken down by his experiences at Richmond, that he was not able to resume his duties in the field until the war was practically closed. Since the war he has advocated publicly all over the country "the policy of prohibition of the liquor-traffic as a political necessity and a public duty."

FRIEDRICH, Johann, D.D. (Munich, 1862), Old Catholic, b. at Poxdorf, Upper Franconia, Bavaria, May 5, 1836; studied at Bamberg and Munich; was ordained priest, June 4, 1859; became privat-docent 1862, and in 1865 professor extraordinary of theology in the University of Munich. In 1869 he accompanied Cardinal Hohenlohe to the Vatican Council, in the capacity of "theologian;" was there severely criticised because he took Dollinger's position of hostility to the infallibility dogma, and left Rome before the council closed. He flatly refused to accept the dogma; and therefore, by archiepiscopal orders, attendance upon his lectures was forbidden, April 13, 1871, and he was excommunicated, April 17. Nevertheless, he continued to exercise priestly functions, kept his academic position, indeed was promoted, for in June, 1872, he became ordinary professor of doctrinal history, symbolics, patology, Christian archæology, and literature; but in 1882 was removed to the philosophical faculty as professor of history, by request of the Ultramontanes. Although prominent in the organization of the Old Catholic Church, he has kept aloof from it since 1878, because opposed to its abolition of enforced celibacy. His writings embrace Johann Wessel, Regensburg, 1862; Die Lehre des Johann Hus u. ihre Bedeutung für die Entwicklung der neueren Zeit, 1862; Astrologie und Reformation, Munich, 1864; Das wahre Zeitalter des h. Rupert, Bamberg, 1866; Kirchengeschichte Deutschlands, Bamberg (1867, 1. Bd. 1 Thl., Die Römerzeit; 1869, 2. GAVAZZI, Alessandro, Free Christian Church of Italy; b. of Roman-Catholic parents, March 21, 1809, in Bologna, where his father was professor of law, a famous advocate, noted for his antipathy to the Jesuits; entered the Barnabite Order in the Church of Rome, 1825; made rapid strides in knowledge; became professor of rhetoric and belles-lettres in the public college of Caravaggio, at Naples, 1829; entered the priesthood, and for many years preached in different cities to large and enthusiastic audiences, before whom he appeared both as priest and patriot. None more rejoiced than he when Pius IX., in 1846, began his pontificate; for, in common with many, he hailed him as a liberal and progressive pope. He hastened to Rome, and was welcomed by Pius, who appointed him almoner of the Roman legion which was despatched to Vicenza. The people called him "Peter the Hermit," the leader of the new crusade, the rebellion against Austria, 1848. But the change in the papal policy, through Jesuitical influence, compelled Gavazzi to break with him, and to flee to England when the French reinstated the Pope in Rome, July, 1849. He then renounced Roman Catholicism, and has since in Great Britain and America repeatedly lectured upon the evils of the papal system. In 1860 he went with Garibaldi to Sicily. In 1870 he was again in Italy; in 1881 he made his last visit to America. He was one of the organizers of the Free Italian Church (1870), and of its theological college in Rome (1875), in which he is professor of dogmatics, apologetics, and polemics. He is the author of Memoirs, London, 1851; Orations, 1852; Recollections of the last Four Popes, 1859; No Union with Rome: an anti-irenicon, 1871; The Priest in Absolution, 1877. See Father Gavazzi's Life and Lectures, New York, 1853.

GOUGH, John Bartholomew, Congregationalist, layman, famous temperance orator; b. at Sandgate, Kent, Eng., Aug. 22, 1817; d. in Philadelphia, Penn., Feb. 18, 1886. His father had been a soldier from 1798 to 1823, and had been honorably discharged on a pension of twenty pounds per annum. He was of a stern disposition; yet his heart was tender, and his children loved him. In church connections he was a Methodist. Mr. Gough's mother was a Baptist, an intelligent, sober-minded, gentle, and loving woman, who had been for twenty years the village school-mistress. He was taken from school at ten, and put to service in a gentleman's family. In his boyhood he enjoyed a village reputation as a good reader. About this time he was struck on the head by a spade, and rendered insensible. His life was for a time despaired of, and then his reason; and indeed he never fully recovered from the blow, for, whenever he was excited from any cause, he felt pricking and darting sensations in his head. One of his earliest amusements was to personate characters, as in amateur Punch-and-Judy shows, and otherwise, showing his rare talent for mimicry and acting. There seeming to be small prospect of his advancement at home, his parents accepted the offer of a Sandgate family about to emigrate to America, who engaged for ten guineas to take him with them, have him taught a trade, and provide for him until he was twenty-one. He sailed from London, June 10, 1829, and arrived in New York, Aug. 3; went with the family to the farm they had purchased in Oneida County, N. Y., and staid with them for two years; and then, having received his father's permission, he left them, and made his way to New-York City, where he arrived in the latter part of December, 1831, friendless, and with only a half-dollar in his pocket. He was then a member of the Methodist-Episcopal Church on probation, and so was induced to lay his case before Mr. Dands, the agent of the Christian Advocate and Journal, upon whom he made so favorable an impression, that he secured him a place as errand-boy and apprentice in the book-binding in the Methodist Book Concern, where he had for a companion John McClintock, who afterwards became the well-known Methodist theologian. Young Gough was taught book-binding, and soon became remarkably skilful. Some of his Methodist friends proposed to educate him for the ministry, but the project was abandoned,—indeed, he withdrew from the denomination. (He later on joined the Congregational Church.) In 1832 he left the Book Concern, and secured elsewhere such good wages by his trade, that he sent for his father, mother, and only sister, who was two years his junior, to join him in New York; and the latter two arrived in August, 1833. His father remained behind, so as not to lose his pension. His sister was a straw-bonnet maker, and worked at her trade in the city. But in November, 1832, he and his sister lost their positions, owing to the hard times, and did not soon get regular employment. Thus the family was reduced to such straits, that when his mother died, July 8, 1834, there was no money for a funeral, and her body was buried in the potter's field. After a brief visit to his former home in Oneida County, he returned to work in the city in September. It was then, when he was about eighteen years old, that he began to drink. His fund of amusing stories, and his wonderful ability to tell them, naturally made him a favorite among the young men he met. Under the name of Gilbert, he sang a comic song entitled "The Water Party" at the Franklin Theatre in Chatham Street, New York. In 1836 he went to Bristol, R. I., and then to Providence. His intemperance was now noticeable, and led to his discharge by successive employers. Once, while out of work, he played low-comedy parts in a theatre in Providence, and then in Boston, where, strangely enough, he personated the keeper of a temperance inn in a play entitled Departed Spirit, or the Temperance Hoax (in which Deacon Moses Grant and Dr. Lyman Beecher were ridiculed), but his engagement lasted only a few weeks. He frequently sang comic songs in public. In 1838 he married at Newburyport, Mass.; but his wife and child died at Worcester in 1840. On the last Sunday of October, 1842, at the age of twenty-five, by invitation of Joel Dudley Stratton, who at the time was a waiter in the American Temperance House at Worcester, Mass., but later was a boot-crimper (see sketch of Stratton in Gough's Autobiog., p. 522), he signed the pledge of total abstinence from all intoxicating liquors, at Worcester. The next week he was called upon to relate his experience as a drunkard; and the way in which he told his story of wretchedness, disease, and want, led to frequent requests to repeat it in public, and so he gradually became prominent as a temperance orator. Within five months (April, 1843) he thoughtlessly violated his pledge in Boston, when, almost insane in consequence of a drug taken to relieve his nervous exhaustion, he was offered, by an old companion, a glass of brandy. Again on Friday, Sept. 5, 1845, in New-York City, he was tricked into drinking liquor in a glass of soda-water. On each occasion the single glass aroused his craving, and he drank until intoxicated. His second fall was the more deplorable because he was then a widely known advocate of total abstinence. But he retained the confidence of the public, and showed true repentance. On Nov. 24, 1843, at Worcester, he married Miss Mary Whitcomb, his second wife. In 1853 he was invited by the Scottish Temperance League, and the British Temperance Association, to lecture on temperance in Great Britain for a few weeks; but he staid two years, and returned in 1857, and remained three years. On Nov. 21, 1860, he delivered at New Haven, Conn., his first lecture not directly upon temperance ("Street Life in London"), and thus entered a broader field in which, by his lectures on "London," "Eloquence and Orators," "Peculiar People," "Habit," and other topics, he has delighted thousands on both sides of the ocean. But he never lost interest in temperance work, and introduced the theme prominently in every lecture.

Mr. Gough was one of the most remarkable natural orators of this century. He was endowed with a musical and flexible voice, a winning manner, and a fine presence. He had both laughter and tears at his disposal. No one was superior to him as a story-teller. In proof of his popularity, it may be mentioned, that his receipts per lecture rose from $2.77 in 1843, to $173.39 in 1867. (See Autobiography, pp. 247, 248.) His life was that of a humble Christian, nor could he ever forget his years of intemperance. He was remarkably gifted in prayer. He was the author of several volumes, — Autobiography, London, 1846 (it was dictated to John Ross Dix, — or, as he then called himself, John Dix Ross, — a short-hand writer, who then was an inmate of his family, and who subsequently claimed the authorship of the book on the strength of a few verbal alterations he had made); Orations, 1854; Autobiography and Personal Recollections, Springfield, Mass., 1869; Temperance Lectures, New York, 1879; Sunlight and Shadow; or, Gleanings from my Life-work, London, 1881; Platform Echoes, Hartford, 1886. *

HALL, John, D.D. (Washington and Jefferson College, Washington, Penn., 1866), LL.D. (College of New Jersey, Princeton, 1885, and from Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., 1885), Presbyterian; b. in County Armagh, Ireland, July 31, 1829; graduated from the Royal College, and the General Assembly's Theological College, both in Belfast; and was licensed to preach in 1849. For the next three years he labored as the "students' missionary" in the West of Ireland. In 1852 he began his regular ministry as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Armagh; in 1858 he went to Dublin as collegiate pastor of Mary's Abbey; and thence in 1867 to the Fifth-avenue Presbyterian Church, New-York City, where he still is. In college he was repeatedly Hebrew prizeman; and in Dublin his interest in education led to his being appointed by the Queen, in 1860, a member of the Board of National Education, upon which he served gratuitously until his departure to America. In 1867 he came as a delegate from the Presbyterian Church in Ireland to the Presbyterian Church in America. In 1882 he was elected chancellor of the University of the City of New York, and in 1885 accepted the position, having meanwhile been chancellor ad interim. He receives, however, no salary, and is assisted by a vice-chancellor. In 1874 his congregation removed from the corner of Fifth Avenue and Nineteenth Street to that of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, where they had erected a spacious building at the cost of a million dollars. Dr. Hall is the author of Family Prayers for Four Weeks, New York, 1868; Papers for Home Reading, 1871; Familiar Talks to Boys,

n. d.; Questions of the Day, 1873; God's Word through Preaching, 1875 (Lyman Beecher Lectures at Yale Seminary); Foundation Stones for Young Builders, New Year's Book for the Boys and Girls of America, Philadelphia, 1880; A Christian Home, How to make and how to maintain it, 1883.

HALL, Newman, LL.B. (London University, 1855), Congregationalist; b. at Maidstone, Kent, near London, Eng., May 22, 1816; educated at Totteridge and at Highbury College; and graduated B.A. at the University of London, 1841. From 1842 to 1854 he was minister of the Albion Congregational Church, Hull. In 1854 he went to London, to his present charge. The congregation then worshipped in the Surrey Chapel (Rowland Hill's), Blackfriars Road; but in 1876 they removed to their new building, Christ Church, on the Westminster-Bridge road. Mr. Hall's ministry has been an eventful one, on account of the independence and vigor of his work. He was among the earliest advocates of total abstinence in England, a deprecator of the fears of Roman-Catholic aggression in 1850, and a faithful friend of the North in the late Civil War. After that war he made an extensive tour through the Northern States, with the express design of allaying the popular bitterness against Great Britain, and preached before both houses of Congress assembled in the House of Representatives, on a Sunday in November, 1867. As a memorial of this visit, there was built the Lincoln Tower, as part of his new church, by joint subscription of the British and Americans. This church cost £60,000, and seats two thousand persons. The Church-of-England service is used in a slightly modified form. Mr. Hall is the author of the tract Come to Jesus, London, 1846 (of which nearly 3,000,000 copies have been circulated, in upwards of twenty languages); It is I, 1848 (139,000 copies of the English ed. up to 1885); Antidote to Fear, 1850, new ed. 1869; The Land of the Forum and the Vatican (travels), 1852, new ed. 1859; Sacrifice, or Pardon and Purity through the Cross, 1857; Conflict and Victory (a biography of his father, J. V. Hall), 1865, new ed. 1874; Homeward Bound, and other Sermons, 1868; From Liverpool to St. Louis, 1868; Pilgrim Songs in Cloud and Sunshine (poems), 1871; Prayer, its Reasonableness and Efficacy, 1875; The Lord's Prayer: a Practical Meditation, 1883; Songs of Earth and Heaven, 1885; besides several tracts and minor treatises, of which may be mentioned, My Friends; Follow Jesus (246,000 copies of the English ed. up to 1885); Now; Quench not the Spirit; Memoir of Rowland Hill; Grace and Glory; Scriptural Claims of Teetotalism.

HAY, Charles Augustus, D.D. (Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, Penn., 1859), Lutheran (General Synod); b. at York, Penn., Feb. 11, 1821; graduated at Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, Penn., and studied in Germany at Berlin and Halle. After a nine-months' pastorate at Middletown, Md., he became in 1845 professor of Hebrew, German, and New-Testament exegesis, in the Gettysburg Theological Seminary, and served until 1848, and again from 1865 to the present time. From 1848 to 1849 he was pastor at Hanover, Penn.; and from 1850 to 1865, at Harrisburg. He is the author of Life of Captain Sees, Harrisburg, 1867; and, with Prof. Dr. H. E. Jacobs, translated Schmid's Doctrinal Theology of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, Philadelphia, 1875.

HAYES, Benjamin Francis, D.D. (Hillsdale College, Hillsdale, Mich., 1871), Free Baptist; b. at New Gloucester, Me., March 28, 1830; graduated at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me., 1855, and from the Freewill Baptist Theological Seminary, New Hampton, N.H. (now at Lewiston, Me.), 1858; was teacher of sciences and German in New Hampton Literary Institution, 1855-59; pastor of Free Baptist Church at Olneyville, R.I., 1859-63; principal of Lapham Institute, North Scituate, R.I., 1863-65; since 1865 has been professor in Bates College, Lewiston, Me. (professor of modern languages, 1865-69; of intellectual and moral philosophy since 1869); and since 1873 professor of exegetical theology in the Free Baptist Theological Seminary at Lewiston, Me. He studied at Halle, Germany, with Ulrichi, 1873-74. He has published since 1860 various articles in the Freewill Baptist Quarterly, Centennial Record, etc., Dover, N.H.; also Questions and Notes, with an Analysis of Butler's Analogy, Lewiston, Me.

HAYGOOD, Atticus Greene, D.D. (Emory College, Oxford, Ga., 1870), LL.D. (South-Western University, Georgetown, Tex., 1884), Methodist (Southern Church); b. at Watkinsville, Ga., Nov. 19, 1839; graduated at Emory College, Oxford, Ga., 1859; entered the ministry, was Sunday-school secretary M. E. Church South, 1870-75; president of Emory College, 1876-84; agent of the "John F. Slater Fund" since 1885. He declined election as bishop in 1882; was member of General Conference in 1870, 1874, 1878, and 1882. He is the author of Our Children, New York, 1876; Our Brother in Black, 1881; Sermons and Speeches, Nashville, Tenn., 1883.

HEARD, John Bickford, Church of England; b. in Dublin, Ireland, Oct. 26, 1828; entered Caius College, Cambridge, obtained a scholarship, wrote the Hulsean theological prize essay, took the Whewell prize in moral philosophy, and graduated B.A. (first class in moral science tripos) 1853, M.A. 1862. He was ordained deacon and priest, 1852; vicar of Bilton, Harrogate, 1864-68; editor

Religious Tract Society, 1866-73; curate of St. Andrew's, Westminster, London, 1878-80; and since 1880 has been vicar of St. John's, Caterham, Surrey. His standpoint is that of Tholuck and the German "Vermittelung" school. He holds firmly the historical faith as summed up in the Apostles' Creed, but classes inspiration, as he does that of church authority, among the inquirenda rather than credenda. His principal aim as a writer has been to trace the lines of a Christian psychology which should form a support and not a conflict with theology as at present. The reigning Cartesianism of body and soul seems to him to be a defective draught of human nature; and the error being a root one has affected the whole of theology, at least of the Western Church and since Augustine. To this extent he describes himself as anti-Augustinus, not as opposing Augustine's doctrines of grace, but as showing that Paulinism is a much deeper, truer, and broader draught of the purposes of God than the theology of the fifth century. He is the author of The Pastor and Parish (a £100 prize essay on pastoral theology), London, 1865; The Tripartite Nature of Man, Edinburgh, 1870, 5th ed. 1883; Old and New Theology: a Constructive Critique, 1885.

HECKER, Isaac Thomas, Roman Catholic; b. in New-York City, Dec. 18, 1819; brought up a Protestant; in 1843 joined the community at Brook Farm, West Roxbury, Mass., and some months later that at Fruitlands, Worcester County, Mass. For a time he lived with Thoreau in his hermitage. In 1845, on returning to New York, he became a Roman Catholic, and entered the Society of the Redemptorist Fathers in 1847, having passed a novitiate of two years at St. Trond, Belgium. Until 1851 he did mission work in England. He returned to America in 1851, and continued his labors there. In 1857 he was at Rome released from his Redemptorist vows, and allowed to organize a new society, "The Congregation of St. Paul the Apostle," of which he has ever been the chief. The Paulist Fathers, as they are called, are almost entirely Americans and converts from Protestantism, and have proved themselves most efficient. Since 1865 they have carried on The Catholic World, a monthly of ability and honesty. Father Hecker attended the Vatican Council as procurator of Bishop Rosencrans, Columbus, O. He is the author of Questions of the Soul, 1855; Aspirations of Nature, 1857; Catholicity in the United States, 1879; Catholics and Protestants agreeing on the School Question, 1881 (the last two are pamphlets). *

HEDGE, Frederic Henry, D.D. (Harvard College, Cambridge, Mass., 1852), Unitarian; b. at Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 12, 1805; graduated at Harvard College, Cambridge, Mass., 1825, and at its divinity school, 1828; became pastor at West Cambridge (now Arlington), 1829; at Bangor, Me., 1835; at Providence, R.I., 1850; and at Brookline, Mass., 1856; retired, 1872. He was teacher of ecclesiastical history (1857-77), and professor of German (1872-81), in Harvard University. "As a preacher he is connected with the Unitarian communion into which he was born, attached to it rather by the absence in that body of any compulsory creed, than by sympathy with its distinctive doctrine. His view of Christ is essentially that of the two natures, as defined by the Council of Chalcedon (A. D. 451)." He was for some years president of the American Unitarian Association. He is the author of Prose Writers of Germany, Philadelphia, 1848, 3d ed. 1871; Christian Liturgy for the Use of the Church, Boston, 1853; Reason in Religion, 1865, 2d ed. 1875 (repub., London); The Primeval World of Hebrew Tradition, 1870; The Ways of the Spirit, and other Essays, 1877; Atheism in Philosophy, and other Essays, 1884; Hours with German Classics, 1886.

HYACINTHE, Father (whose full name is Charles Jean Marie Augustin Hyacinthe Loyson); b. at Orleans, France, March 10, 1827, and educated privately under care of his father, who was rector of the University of France, attached to the Academy of Pau. After taking his degree of B.A. he entered (1845) the Seminary of St. Sulpice, Paris, and there studied philosophy and theology under the first masters of religious science. He was ordained a priest at Notre Dame de Paris, June 14, 1851, and for the next five years was a professor, first of philosophy at the Grand Seminary of Avignon (1851-54), then of dogmatic theology at the Seminary of Nantes (1854-56). In 1856-57 he was curate of St. Sulpice, Paris, being member of the company of the priests of St. Sulpice, and was made honorary canon of Troy. In 1858 he decided upon a monastic life, and made a six-months' novitiate in the Dominican Order (as reformed by Laccordaire); but preferring a more austere order, on April 22, 1862, he entered that of the Barefooted Carmelites (as reformed by St. Theresa and St. John of the Cross in the sixteenth century); rose to be superior of his order in Paris and second definitor of the province of Avignon, and remained in it until September, 1869. From 1864 to 1869 he was metropolitan preacher of Notre Dame de Paris; but refused to be court preacher under Napoleon III., and also to be archbishop of Lyons, always maintaining that his vocation of preacher was preferable to all social or ecclesiastical "preferment." He has preached in the large cities of France (sometimes under great difficulties), England, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, and the United States. On Sept. 20, 1869, he published a manifesto against the usurpations of Rome, protesting against the lack of oecumenity in the convocation of the Vatican Council. At the same time he quitted his convent; and then, to avoid importunity, he went to America for a few months, awaiting the deliberations of the council. When the decree of infallibility was pronounced (July 18, 1870), he found it was impossible for him longer to submit to Rome; and since then he has devoted himself to preaching Catholic reform (the Bible to be read by all, vernacular worship, the cup to be given to the laity, liberty of marriage for priests, freedom of confession), and as far as possible carrying it out in practice. On Sept. 3, 1872, he married in London, Mrs. Emilie Jane (Butterfield) Meriman of New York, N. Y., U. S. A., who had been previously engaged in Catholic reform in Rome. In 1873 he began reformed public worship in Geneva, Switzerland, whither he was called by the disaffected Roman Catholics, who elected him their vicar. There he remained five years, but separated himself from the Old Catholics there, because of their too radical tendencies in politics and religion. In 1877 and 1878 he gave a series of conferences in the Cirque d'Hiver in Paris, on the necessity of religious reform in Catholic countries, which was a political event feared by the French Republic. In 1879 he returned to live in Paris, and opened a free church, known as the Catholic Gallican Church, with the episcopal aid of Bishop Herzog of Bern of the Old Catholic Church, and the bishops of the Anglican Church, with which churches his own is in communion. His church was legalized in December, 1883, by a decree of the French Government, signed by President Grévy. It has therefore the right to exist; but it is free, and unsubsidized by the government. In July, 1885, it numbered over a thousand members and six clergy.

In philosophy M. Loyson is a disciple of Plato, Descartes, Malebranche, and Leibnitz. An assiduous investigator of the Holy Scriptures from earliest childhood, his theology is that of the Bible and of the Fathers. Always a devoted, liberal, and evangelical Catholic, he accepts the Primacy of the early Church, but rejects the Papacy. He holds to the faith of the undivided church, i. e., the Episcopate, as expressed in the Nicene Creed, which he believes to be the broad yet firm basis of all social and scientific progress, as well as the adaptation of all spiritual truth; and his aim is the unity (not uniformity) of all Christians.

Among his numerous publications are the following: Poèmes, Pau, 1841-45; La société civile dans ses rapports avec le Christianisme (Conférences de Notre Dame), Paris, 1867, 5th ed. —; La famille (Conférences de Notre Dame), 1867, 2d ed. —; Education des classes ouvrières, 1867; Profession de la foi Catholique d'une protestante convertie, 1868; De la Réforme Catholique: lettres, fragments, discours, 1869-72, 2d ed (English trans., Catholic reform: Letters, Fragments, etc., by Madame Loyson, introd. by Dean Stanley, London, 1874); L'Église Catholique en Suisse, Geneva, 1875; Réforme Catholique, II. Catholicisme et Protestantisme, Paris, 1873; L'Ultramontanisme et la Révolution, 1873; Trois conférences au Cirque d'Hiver (April 15, 22, and 29, 1877), 1877; Les principes de la Réforme Catholique (Conférences au Cirque d'Hiver), 1878, 1878 (English trans., London, 1879); Programme de la Réforme Catholique, 1879; Liturgie Gallicane, 1879, 5th ed. 1883; L'Inquisition, 1882. In 1880 Madame Hyacinthe Loyson translated into French, and he published, Döllinger's Réunion des Églises. His son, Paul Emmanuel Hyacinthe Loyson, was born at Geneva, Oct. 19, 1873.

On Jan. 1, 1883, he went to his present position, the professorship of Christian evidences and homiletics in the Berkeley Divinity School, Middletown, Conn.

JONES, Samuel P, the "Mountain Evangelist," Methodist Church South; b. in Chambers County, Ala., Oct. 16, 1847; received a good academic education; entered the legal profession, to which his father belonged, in 1870, and practised law for three years in his native county, with indifferent success, owing to his bad habits. He was, however, converted, joined the Methodist Church, and became a preacher under the sanction of the North Georgia Conference. At first he did not go outside of his State; but in 1881 he went into Alabama, and has since been not only all over the South, but also through the North, and has always labored with remarkable success. He uses the plainest speech, and abounds in witty and pregnant sayings. Some of his sermons have been printed, New York, 1885.

LANG, John Marshall, D.D. (Glasgow, 1874), Church of Scotland; b. in the manse of Glasford, Lanarkshire, May 14, 1834; graduated at the University of Glasgow (prizeman in theology and philosophy, and historical medallist), 1856; was successively minister of the East Parish, Aberdeen, 1856; Fyvie Parish, Aberdeenshire, 1858; Anderston Church, Glasgow, 1865; Morningside Parish, Edinburgh, 1868; and since January, 1873, of the Barony Parish, Glasgow. He was associated with the earlier movements in the Church of Scotland, for improvement in modes of worship; was appointed in 1871 convener (chairman) of the Church of Scotland committee on correspondence with foreign churches; along with Professor Milligan, was deputy to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States in 1872; was member of the Councils of the Reformed Churches at Edinburgh, Philadelphia, and Belfast. He was the successor of Norman Macleod in the care of the Barony Parish, the largest in Scotland. He is the author of Heaven and Home, Edinburgh, 1879, 3d ed. 1881; The Last Supper of Our Lord, 1881, 2 editions; Life: is it Worth Living? London, 1883, 2 editions; and contributed to St. Giles' Lectures for 1881 (The Religions of Central America), and for 1883 (A Historical Sketch of the Church of Scotland); and has published sermons, review articles, lectures, etc.

LANGE, Carl Heinrich Rudolf, Lutheran (Missouri Synod); b. at Polnisch Wartenberg, Silesia, Jan. 8, 1825; graduated at Breslau 1846, and licensed in St. Louis, Mo., 1848; since 1878 has been professor of theology in Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, Mo. He is the author of Lehrbuch der Englischen Sprache, Fort Wayne, Ind., 1870; Kleines Lehrbuch der Englischen Sprache, Chicago, Ill., 1873, 8th ed. St. Louis, 1883; Athanasius, De decretis Nic. Syn., Greek text, St. Louis, 1879; Justinus, Apologia, Greek text, 1882.

LANGE, Johann Peter, D.D., United Evangelical; b. on the Bier, a small farm in the parish of Sonnborn, near Elberfeld, Prussia, April 10, 1802; d. at Bonn, July 8, 1884. His father was a farmer and wagoner, and brought his son up in the same occupations, but allowed him at the same time to indulge his passion for reading. He was instructed in the Heidelberg Catechism, which is still used in the Reformed congregations of Prussia, although they are since 1817 united with the Lutheran under the name of the United Evangelical Church. His Latin teacher, the Rev. Hermann Kalthof, who discovered in him unusual talents, induced him to study theology. He attended the gymnasium at Düsseldorf, from Easter, 1821, till autumn, 1822; and the University of Bonn, where he was particularly influenced by Professor Nitzsch, from 1822 till 1825. For a year after leaving the university he was at Langenberg, near Elberfeld, as assistant minister to the Rev. Emil Krummacher (brother of the celebrated Rev. Dr. Frederick William Krummacher), 1825-26; then became successively Reformed pastor of Wald, near Solingen, 1826; of Langenberg, 1828; and of Duisburg, 1832. While at Duisburg, he attracted attention by his brilliant articles in Hengstenberg's Evangelische Kirchenzeitung and other periodicals, by his poems, and by his able work upon the history of the Saviour's infancy (see below) in refutation of Strauss. In 1841, after Strauss had been prevented from taking his professorship of theology in the University of Zürich, Dr. Lange was called to the position. Here he elaborated his Life of Jesus (1844-47, see below), which is a positive refutation of the famous work of Strauss, and had a wide circulation in German and English, and a marked effect upon the large subsequent literature on the subject. He remained in Zürich until 1854, when he was called to a professorial chair in the University of Bonn. In 1860 he became consistorialrath. He labored incessantly as academic teacher and writer, and retained his faculties to the end. He ceased to lecture five days before his death. An American student (Bossard) to whom he showed great kindness, and who informed me of the fact, called, and found him suffering from a cold, but reading and writing as usual, and full of animation and pleasant humor. Even a day before his death, he spoke of the beautiful summer and the beautiful Rhine, and hoped to resume his lectures shortly. "I never saw Lange appear happier than on this day; his eyes were brighter than ever, his countenance was serene, he was all kindness and friendliness, and seemed at peace with the whole world." On the 8th of July he arose as usual, spent the morning among his books, and after dinner, while his daughter went down-stairs to get him his cup of coffee, he quietly fell asleep in his arm-chair, to awake no more on earth.

Dr. Lange was small of stature, had a strong constitution, a benignant face, and bright eye which retained its strength to the last. He was twice happily married, lived in comfortable circumstances, and left a large and interesting family. He was simple in his tastes and habits, of unblemished character, genial, agreeable, full of kindness, wit, and humor, and even in his old age fully alive to all the religious, literary, and social questions of the day. He was at once a poet and a theologian, teeming with new ideas, often fanciful, but always interesting and suggestive. He indulged in poetico-philosophical speculations, and sometimes soared high above the clouds. He was one of the most original and fertile theological authors of the nineteenth century. His theology is biblical and evangelical catholic. His most useful publication is his Bibelwerk, which has probably a larger circulation in Germany and America than any commentary of the same size, and is especially helpful to ministers. He organized the plan, engaged about twenty contributors, and commented himself on Matthew, Mark, John, Romans, Revelation, Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, giving original and brilliant homiletical hints.

He was the author of Die Lehre der heiligen Schrift von der freien und allgemeinen Gnade Gottes, Elberfeld, 1831; Biblische Dichtungen, 1832-34, 2 vols.; Zehn Predigten, 1833; Kleine polemische Gedichte, Duisburg, 1835; Gedichte und Sprüche aus dem Gebiete christlicher Naturbetrachtung, 1835; Die Welt des Herrn in didaktischen Gesängen, Essen, 1835; *Ueber den geschichtlichen Character der kanonischen Evangelien, insbesondere der Kindheitsgeschichte Jesu, mit Beziehung auf das Leben Jesu von D. LEO XIII., His Holiness the Pope, the two hundred and fifty-eighth successor of St. Peter, Vincenzo Gioacchino Pecci, son of Count Ludovico Pecci; b. at Carpineto, Anagni, States of the Church, March 2, 1810; educated at the Jesuit colleges of Viterbo (1818-24) and Rome (Collegio Romano, 1824-31), and graduated D.D. 1831. He then entered the College of Noble Ecclesiastics, attended lectures on canonical and civil law in the Roman University, and graduated D.C.L. 1837. His college course was very brilliant. In 1837 he was appointed by Gregory XVI. a domestic prelate, and referendary of the signatura, March 16, 1837; ordained priest, Dec. 23, 1837; was made successively prothonotary apostolic, and apostolic delegate at Benevento (where he put down brigandage), Perugia, and Spoleto; archbishop of Damietta, in partibus infidelium, Jan. 17, 1843; papal nuncio to Belgium, 1843-46; archbishop of Perugia, Jan. 19, 1846, and so remained until his elevation to the papacy. On Dec. 19, 1853, he was proclaimed cardinal by Pius IX., and Sept. 21, 1877, created Cardinal Camerlengo of the Holy Roman Church. On the death of Pius IX., Feb. 7, 1878, he acted as pope ad tempore, and superintended all the arrangements for the papal obsequies and conclave. The conclave (Feb. 18-20, 1878) to choose a new pope was attended by sixty-two cardinals. He received nineteen votes on the first ballot, thirty-four on the second, forty-four on the third; his election was then made unanimous, and he accepted the position, and chose the name Leo. On March 3 he was crowned in the Sistine Chapel. He retains the prefectship of the following sacred congregations: the Holy Roman and Universal Inquisition or Holy Office, the Apostolic Visitation, the Consistorial Congregation. On March 4, 1878, he restored the papal hierarchy in Scotland. He has proved himself to be much more liberally inclined than Pius IX. was in the latter part of his life; and has shown his scholarly tastes by opening the Vatican to scholars, within certain limits, and by recommending the study of Aquinas. The following are the encyclicals he has issued: (1) Inscrutabili Dei consilio, the inaugural encyclical (April 21, 1878), which shows from history how the Roman Church has been the protectress of all true civilization; (2) Quod Apostolici muneris (Dec. 28, 1878), on the dangers which threaten civilization from communism and socialism, and how they should be met; (3) Æterni Patris (Aug. 4, 1879), on the necessity of a restoration of science upon the foundation of the philosophical principles of Thomas Aquinas; (4) Arcanum divinæ sapientiæ consilium (Feb. 10, 1880), on the holiness and indissolubleness of Christian marriage; (5) Grande munus (Sept. 30, 1880), on the canonization of Cyril and Methodius; (6) Sancta Dei civitas (Dec. 5, 1880), on Roman-Catholic missions; (7) Diuturnum (June 29, 1881), on the origin of the civil power; (8) Auspicato concessum (Sept. 17, 1882), on the third order of St. Francis; (9) Misericors Dei Filius (May 30, 1883), on the rule of the third Seraphic order; (10) Supremi Apostolatus (Sept. 1, 1883), on the rosary of Mary; (11) Nobilissima (Feb. 8, 1884), on the religious affairs of France; (12) Humanum genus (April 20, 1884), on the Masonic "sect;" (13) Immortale Dei (Nov. 1, 1885), on the position of the Roman Church towards modern governments. He has also issued two briefs, (1) Cum hoc sit (Aug. 4, 1880), on St. Thomas Aquinas, the patron of scholars; (2) Sæpenumero considerantes (Aug. 13, 1883), on historical studies; and one apostolic letter, Militans Christi (March 12, 1881), appointing an extraordinary jubilee. The complete Latin text of all these is found in the Papæ Acta Leonis XIII., Paris, 1885.

LIGHTFOOT, Right Rev. Joseph Barber, D.D. (Cambridge, 1864; Durham, 1879), D.C.L. (Oxford, 1879), LL.D. (Glasgow, 1879), lord bishop of Durham, Church of England; b. at Liverpool, April 13, 1828; entered Trinity College, Cambridge; obtained a scholarship in 1849; graduated B.A. (wrangler, senior classic, and senior medallist) 1851, M.A. 1854; elected fellow of his college, 1852; in 1853 he was Norrisian prizeman. He was ordained deacon in 1854, and priest in 1858. In 1857 he was appointed tutor in his college; in 1858 was select preacher to the University of Cambridge; in 1861 became chaplain to the late Prince Consort, and Hulsean professor of divinity at Cambridge; in 1862, examining chaplain to the bishop of London (Dr. Tait), and honorary chaplain in ordinary to the Queen; in 1866 and 1867 was Whitehall preacher. In 1869, Dr. Tait being elevated to the see of Canterbury, he became one of his examining chaplains, and remained so until 1879. From 1871 to 1879 he was canon residentiary of St. Paul's Cathedral, London; in 1874 and 1875 he was select preacher at Oxford. In 1875 he resigned his Hulsean professorship, and became Lady Margaret professor of divinity, Cambridge, and in the same year deputy clerk of the closet to her Majesty. In 1879 he was recommended by the Earl of Beaconsfield to the then vacant see of Durham, and was consecrated bishop in Westminster Abbey. His remarkable scholarship is shown in his commentaries on Galatians (London, 1865, 8th ed. 1884), Philippians (1868, 7th ed. 1883), Colossians, and Philemon (1875, 8th ed. 1886), and on the Apostolic Fathers, S. Clement of Rome (1869; appendix volume, containing the complete second epistle discovered by Bryennios, 1877), S. Ignatius, and S. Polycarp (1885, 2 vols.). Each of these commentaries contains a revised Greek text, introduction, notes, and dissertations. The last is a peculiar feature of great interest and value. Dr. Lightfoot was one of the original members of the New-Testament Company of Bible Revisers, and wrote On a Fresh Revision of the English New Testament, 1871, 2d ed. 1872 (republished, with permission, by Dr. Schaff, New York, 1873).

M.

MABON, William Augustus Van Vranken, D.D. (Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N.J., 1861), LL.D. (Union College, Schenectady, N.Y., 1882), b. at New Brunswick, N.J., Jan. 24, 1822; graduated at Union College, Schenectady, N.Y., 1840, and at New Brunswick Theological Seminary, N.J., 1844; became home missionary at Buffalo, N.Y., 1844; pastor at New Durham, Hudson Co., N.J., and superintendent of the county schools, 1846; professor of didactic and polemic theology in the Reformed (Dutch) Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, N.J., 1881. He edited The Sower, New York, 1878-79. See Appendix.

McALL, Robert Whitaker, F.L.S., Congregationalist; b. at Macclesfield, Cheshire, Eng., Dec. 17, 1821; studied architecture under Mr. Walters, architect of the Free Trade Hall, Manchester, and Sir Gilbert Scott, R.A.; afterwards turned his attention to theology, and studied in the Lancashire Independent (Congregational and theological) College, Manchester; graduated B.A. at London University in 1847; and for twenty-four years was a Congregational pastor in England, during which time he ministered to four churches. In 1871, while pastor at Hadleigh, Suffolk, he and his wife made a brief holiday visit to Paris, and were so struck with the spiritual destitution of the working classes there, that they resolved to devote themselves to the effort to evangelize them. Accordingly he left his charge, much to its regret, and single-handed they began their mission. Their success has been beyond their hopes. In 1885 there were a hundred stations in Paris and throughout France. The money required to carry on their operations comes from France, Great Britain, and America. See article McAll Mission, in Encyclopædia.

McARTHUR, Robert Stuart, D.D. (University of Rochester, N.Y., 1880), Baptist; b. at Dalesville, Argenteuil County, Province of Quebec, Can., Aug. 31, 1841; graduated from the University of Rochester, N.Y., 1867, and from the Rochester Theological Seminary, N.Y., 1870; and since June, 1870, has been pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, New-York City, which in 1883 erected a new church at an expense of nearly five hundred thousand dollars. He is the regular weekly New-York correspondent of the Chicago Standard, one of the editors of The Baptist Quarterly Review (since 1885), and with Rev. Dr. C. S. Robinson of the Calvary Selection of Hymns and Spiritual Songs, New York, 1879.

McAULEY, Jeremiah (better known as "Jerry McAuley"), layman; b. in Ireland, in the year 1839; d. in New-York City, Sept. 18, 1884. His father was a counterfeiter, who fled the country to escape arrest while his son was an infant. Jerry was brought up by his grandmother, who was a devout Romanist; but he never received any schooling. At the age of thirteen he came to New-York City, and lived with a married sister for a time. Soon he became as great a rogue as one of his years could be. On leaving his sister he boarded in Water Street, and supported himself by stealing from vessels lying in the river. The money procured by selling the articles stolen was spent in all sorts of wickedness. He became a prize-fighter, and a terror and a nuisance in the Fourth Ward. When nineteen years old he was arrested for highway robbery, an offence he had not committed. But he had no one to defend him; and so bad was his character, that he was condemned, in January, 1857, on circumstantial evidence, to fifteen years imprisonment at Sing-Sing. On his way thither he determined to be obedient to prison rules, do the best he could under the circumstances, and trust that somebody would be raised up to help him. He was set at carpet-weaving, and for two years had the approbation of his keepers. For the next three years he was, in consequence of illness, uneasy and intractable, and hence often severely punished, without being anywise improved. On one Sunday, when he had been some five years in prison, Orville Gardner (known as "Awful" Gardner), a former confederate in sin, addressed the convicts, and made a profound impression upon Jerry. On returning to his cell he took down the Bible, with which each cell is supplied, to find a verse which Gardner had quoted. He soon became a constant Bible-reader; and so, although he never found the verse he sought, he stored his mind with the Word of God. A great desire to be saved was awakened within him. But weeks of anxiety and struggle passed before the "words were distinctly spoken to his soul" which assured him that he was forgiven. Then the Lord began to use him in the prison among his fellow-convicts, and several were led to Christ by him. On March 8, 1864, he was pardoned. Like many another one, he had no one to help him to an honest living on leaving prison, so fell back into his former evil courses. He went into the bounty business, and made a great deal of money, which he spent freely. He became a sporting man, and often attended the races. After the war he dealt in stolen and smuggled goods, which he paid for in counterfeit money, until, being found out, no one would steal for him. He then became once more a river thief. But he could not shake off the religious impressions received in prison, although he tried to deaden conscience by drink. This wretched life continued until 1872, when he found Christian friends who manfully stood by him, notwithstanding his frequent falls, until he was confirmed in the Christian life. In October, 1872, he opened his "Helping Hand for Men," at 316 Water Street, as a resort for the forlorn wayfarers, sailors, and others who frequented the locality. From the start the work was remarkably blessed. He manifested extraordinary aptitude for dealing with the degraded. His kindly ways drew them to him; while his simple-minded, whole-hearted piety, and his burning zeal, deeply impressed them. The result was, that many were converted. In 1876 the old building was replaced by a far better one, and the mission incorporated under the title of "The McAuley Water-street Mission." In 1882, feeling that his work in Water Street was done, he began a similar work at 104 West Thirty-second Street, called "The Cremorne Mission," from its contiguity to the notorious Cremorne Garden. In June, 1883, he began the publication of Jerry McAuley's Newspaper, which is still issued every other Thursday. Some time before his death his health began to fail, but he continued his work. His end came suddenly. On Wednesday, Sept. 17, 1884, he had a hemorrhage of the lungs, and on Thursday afternoon at four o'clock another, and in a few minutes he was dead. On Sunday, Sept. 21, at half-past two P.M., he was buried from the Broadway Tabernacle, Thirty-fourth Street and Sixth Avenue. The spacious church was crowded in every part long before the services began, and a great multitude stood all around the building. For nearly two hours after the conclusion of the services, the procession of mourners filed past the coffin. In the throng were many of the very classes among whom and for whom his life had been spent, — the criminal, the vicious, the immoral.

By competent testimony and common acknowledgment Jerry McAuley was one of the most useful, remarkable, and indeed wonderful men in the city of New York. Himself for many years a criminal and an outcast, he knew from bitter experience that the way of transgressors is hard. Himself the subject of the Saviour's infinite love, he knew that God had mercy for even the vilest. When, therefore, he spoke to those who had fallen, it was with a thorough knowledge which they could not fail to recognize. His work was, however, not carried on without many hinderances and difficulties; but he triumphed over all. Liberal and wealthy friends supported his enterprises, and in his wife he found a devoted and efficient helper. See Jerry McAuley, His Life and Work, ed. Rev. R. M. Offord, New York, 1885. *

MCCABE, Charles Cardwell, D.D. (Central Tennessee College, Nashville, Tenn., 1875), Methodist; b. at Athens, O., Oct. 11, 1836; studied at Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, O., but did not graduate; was pastor in the Ohio Conference, 1860-61; chaplain of the 122d Ohio Infantry, 1862-63; was taken prisoner at the battle of Winchester, Va., and was in Libby Prison, Richmond, Va., for four months; on his release rejoined his regiment; agent of the Christian Commission, 1864-65; Centenary agent in Ohio, 1866-67; assistant secretary of the Church Extension Society, 1868-84; missionary secretary since 1884.

MCCLELLAN, John Brown, Church of England; b. in Glasgow, Scotland, March 7, 1836; educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, 1855-58 (elected scholar 1857); graduated B.A. (Wrangham gold medallist, and the only double first classical and mathematical honors of his year) 1858, M.A. 1861; was elected fellow of Trinity College, 1859; ordained deacon 1860, priest 1861; was vicar of Bottisham, diocese of Ely, 1861-79; rural dean of first division of Camp's deanery, 1871-77; since 1880 he has been principal of the Royal Agricultural College, Cirencester. He is a moderate High Churchman, in favor of disestablishment and of freedom of the Church. He is the author of Fourth Nicene Canon, and Election and Consecration of Bishops, London, 1870; A New Translation of the New Testament, from a critically revised Greek Text, a Contribution to Christian Evidence, vol. i. (the Four Gospels, with notes and dissertations, and a new chronological harmony) 1875.

MCCLOSKEY, His Eminence John, Cardinal, D.D., Roman Catholic; b. in Brooklyn, N.Y., March 10, 1810; d. in New York, Oct. 10, 1885. He was graduated with the highest honors at St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md., 1828; ordained priest at New York, Jan. 9, 1834; studied for two years at the Collegium Romanum in Rome, and a year in France. Returning to America in 1837, he was appointed pastor of St. Joseph's Church, New-York City. On March 10, 1844, he was consecrated bishop of Axiere in partibus, and co-adjutor to the bishop (later archbishop) of New York (John Hughes); translated to the new see of Albany, May 21, 1847; after the death of Archbishop Hughes (Jan. 3, 1864) he was appointed his successor, May 6, 1864. He attended the Vatican Council (1869-70), and was on the Committee on Discipline. He was by Pius IX. created cardinal priest of the Most Holy Roman Church, March 15, 1875, under the title of "Sancta Maria sopra Minervam." He was the first American cardinal. He received the red hat from Leo XIII. in the consistory held in Rome on March 28, 1878. He enjoyed the respect of Protestant and Roman Catholic alike; and did much for his Church, as by buildings (e.g., the Fifth-avenue Cathedral) and new institutions, and by the introduction of the Capuchins, Franciscans, Sisters and Little Sisters of the Poor, who had previously no houses in his diocese. Under him the number of churches in New York increased from seventy to a hundred and seventy, and the number of clergy from a hundred and fifty to four hundred. Archbishop Gibbons, in his funeral oration, said of him: "He [the cardinal] has left you . . . the legacy of a pure and unsullied life, as priest, bishop, archbishop, and cardinal. He never tarished the surplice of the priest, nor the rochet of the bishop, nor the pallium of the archbishop, nor the scarlet robes of the cardinal. After spending upwards of half a century in the exercise of the ministry, he goes down to his honored grave without a stain upon his moral character."

MCCOOK, Henry Christopher, D.D. (Lafayette College, Easton, Penn., 1880), Presbyterian; b. at New Lisbon, O., July 3, 1837; graduated at Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Penn., 1859; studied at the Western Theological Seminary, Allegheny, Penn., 1859-61; was first lieutenant Company F, Forty-first Regiment Illinois Volunteers, 1861; chaplain of the regiment, 1861-62; acting pastor, Clinton, Ill., 1861, 1862-63; home missionary, St. Louis, Mo., 1863-70; since 1870 has been pastor of the Tabernacle Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia. He is vice-president of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia (in whose proceedings he has published numerous papers upon the habits and industry of American ants and spiders), and vice-director of the American Entomological Society. MANNING, His Eminence Henry Edward, Cardinal, D.D. (Rome, Italy, 1854), Roman Catholic; b. at Totteridge, Hertfordshire, Eng., July 15, 1808; educated at Harrow and at Balliol College, Oxford; graduated B. A. (first-class in classics), 1830, and was elected fellow of Merton College, and for some time a select preacher to the university. In 1834 he became rector of Lavington and Graffham, Sussex, and married. In 1840 he was appointed archdeacon of Chichester. He was a leader in the so-called "Oxford movement," and in 1851 resigned his ecclesiastical preferments. On April 20, 1851, entered the Roman-Catholic Church, and (his wife having died some time previously), a little later, the priesthood. He then repaired to Rome, where he studied theology until 1854, when he received the degree of D.D. Returning to England, he entered upon a career of great activity. In 1857 he founded at Bayswater a congregation of the "Oblates of St. Charles Borromeo," and became its first superior; summoned Zion Sisters from Paris to teach the girls' schools; erected a proctory; founded a Roman-Catholic university at Kensington (Oct. 15, 1874), and in other ways greatly increased the influence of his Church. In recognition of his eminent services, Pius IX. appointed him successively provost of the Roman-Catholic archdiocese of Westminster (1857), prothonotary apostolic and his domestic prelate (1860), archbishop of Westminster (consecrated June 8, 1865), and cardinal priest, with the title of SS. Andrew and Gregory on the Cælian Hill, March 15, 1875; received his hat in a consistory held at the Vatican, Dec. 31, 1877. Cardinal Manning sat in the Vatican Council, 1869-70. MARTIN, William Alexander Parsons, D.D. (Lafayette College, Easton, Penn., 1860), LL.D. (University of the City of New York, 1870), Presbyterian; b. at Livonia, Ind., April 10, 1827; graduated at the State University at Bloomington, Ind., and at the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of New Albany (now removed to Chicago); from 1850-60 was a missionary at Ningpo, China; from 1863-68 was missionary at Peking; in 1869 became president of the Imperial Tungwen College of Peking, and professor of international law. He visited the United States in 1860, 1868, and 1879. He is a member of the European Institute of International Law, and of other learned societies. His position in China is of the highest importance. During his long life there he has had several unusual experiences. In 1855 he was captured by Chinese pirates; in 1858 he served as interpreter to the United-States minister in negotiating the treaty of Tientsin; in 1859 he accompained the United-States minister to Peking, and to Yedo, Japan; in 1866 he visited a colony of Jews in Honan, visiting also the tomb of Confucius, and was the first foreigner in recent times to make the journey from Peking to Shanghai by the grand canal (for account of this journey, see Journal North China Branch Royal Asiatic Society, 1866); in the conflict with France, 1884-85, as well as in former disputes, acted as adviser to the Chinese Government on questions of international law, and in 1885 was made a mandarin of the third rank, by imperial decree. In February, 1885, he was elected first president of the newly organized Oriental Society of Peking. Dr. Martin edited The Peking Scientific Magazine from 1875 to 1878 (printed in Chinese); and has written in Chinese, Evidences of Christianity, 1855, 10th ed. 1885 (translated into Japanese, and widely circulated in Japan); The Three Principles (1856), and Religious Allegories (1857), and numerous small tracts which have been widely distributed. In English, besides his correspondence with the learned societies to which he belongs, and his contributions to reviews and other periodicals, he has published The Education and Philosophy of the Chinese, Shanghai and London, 1880, new ed. under title, The Chinese; their Education, Philosophy, and Letters, New York, 1881. In French he has written much. But his largest works have been his translations into Chinese, of Wheaton (1863) and of Woolsey (1875) and Bluntschli (1879) on International Law, De Marten's Guide diplomatique (1874), and the compilation in Chinese of courses of natural philosophy (1866) and mathematical physics (1885).

MORISON, James, D.D. (Adrian College, Adrian, Mich., 1862; University of Glasgow, 1882), Evangelical Union; b. at Bathgate, Linlithgowshire, Scotland, Feb. 14, 1816; graduated in arts at the University of Edinburgh, and studied theology at the United Presbyterian Halls of Glasgow and Edinburgh; was pastor in Kilmarnock, 1840-51, and in Glasgow, 1851-84. From the first year of his pastorate he had a hard battle to fight for the doctrine of the universality of Christ's atonement. The battle continued for more than twenty years. The ecclesiastical outcome is a group of about a hundred churches in Scotland, called the Evangelical Union. Since 1843 he has been principal and professor of New-Testament exegesis in Evangelical Union Hall, Glasgow. He holds to "the three great universalities: (1) God's love to 'all,' (2) Christ's atonement for 'all,' (3) the Holy Spirit's influence shed forth on 'all.'" He is the author of The Extent of the Atonement, London, 1842; Saving Faith, 1842; An Exposition of the Ninth Chapter of the Epistle to the Romans, 1849; Vindication of the Universality of the Atonement, 1861; Apology for Evangelical Doctrines, 1863; A Critical Exposition of the Third Chapter of the Epistle to the Romans, 1866; A Practical Commentary on the Gospel of St. Matthew, 1870, 5th ed. 1883; do. on St. Mark, 1873, 3d ed. 1882 (the last two republished from last edition, Boston, Mark 1882, Matthew 1883).

MUELLER, George (originally Georg Friedrich), Plymouth Brother, founder of the Bristol Orphanage; b. at Kroppenstädt, near Halberstadt, Prussia, Sept. 27, 1805. After preliminary training at the Cathedral classical school at Halberstadt, at Heimersleben, under a classical tutor, and at the Nordhausen gymnasium, he entered the University of Halle, 1825. His early life had been careless, even profligate, and his reckless course involved him in pecuniary embarrassments. Once (during the Christmas holidays of 1821) he was imprisoned for debt contracted at a hotel in Wolfenbüttel. He often told deliberate lies. But shortly after entering the university he was converted, and, declining to receive any further support from his father, entered upon that life of faith in the Lord to supply his needs, which has been so remarkable. He determined to become a missionary, and meanwhile manifested his Christian zeal in visiting the sick, distributing tracts, and in conversing upon the subject of religion with persons whom he casually met. In August, 1826, he began to preach, having obtained license to do so in consequence of the very honorable testimonials he brought with him to the university. For two months he lived in Franke's Orphan House at Halle, in the free lodgings provided for poor divinity students. In March, 1829, having through ill health obtained release from military duty, — an obligation which he had feared would prevent him from accepting the society's appointment received June, 1828, — he went to London to prepare himself for missionary work among the Jews, in the service of the London Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews. But after some months of the prescribed study of Hebrew, Chaldee, and German Jewish, he left the society, January, 1830; joined the Plymouth Brethren; became minister at Teignmouth; and married Mary Groves, the daughter of Kitto's friend. Of his own accord he declined to receive any stated salary, abolished pew-rents, and from October, 1830, lived upon voluntary offerings put in the box provided for them in the chapel. This course often reduced himself and wife to great straits; but by prayer and simple faith their wants were always ultimately relieved. In 1832 he became pastor of Gideon Chapel, Bristol. Impressed by the number of destitute children he found in Bristol, he prayed for divine guidance in doing something for them. Being led thereto, as he believed, he collected the children at 8 A.M., gave them a piece of bread for breakfast, then taught them to read, and read the Bible to them for about an hour and a half. But the plan not working well, he abandoned it, and in 1834 started "The Scriptural Knowledge Institution for Home and Abroad," which was designed to assist day-schools, Sunday schools, and adult-schools; to circulate the Holy Scriptures; to aid missionary work; to board, clothe, and educate scripturally, whole orphan children. The institution, he decided, should have no patron but the Lord, no workers but believers, and no debts. Up to 1884 it had provided for the education of 95,143 children and grown persons in its schools; circulated over 1,000,000 copies or portions of the Bible; spent £196,633. 12s. 5d. on missionary work; and trained up 6,892 orphans at a cost of £661,186. 9s. 2d. It is still flourishing. He then asked the Lord to give him a suitable house for the orphan children, assistants for the work, and a thousand pounds in money. And he was heard. Provided with assistants and money, he hired a house on Wilson Street, Bristol, and opened his orphanage on April 11, 1836. A second house was opened about eight months after the first. By June, 1837, he had received the asked-for thousand pounds. He then opened a third house; a fourth, March, 1844. He then bought a site on Ashley Down, near Bristol, and put up the first building, 1846. There are now there five immense orphan-houses, containing over two thousand inmates. The last one was opened in 1869. In February, 1870, his wife, who had so faithfully joined him in all his enterprises, died. After a time he re-married. Besides managing his orphanages and the institution, and preaching to his congregation, he has also taken missionary tours through the British Isles, the United States (going across the continent) and Canada (1877). In 1881 he visited the East, and in 1882 India. As is well known, he does not in the ordinary way advertise any of his enterprises. But the circulation of his Life of Trust: Narrative of the Lord's Dealings with George Müller, first issued in 1837, and continued in 1841, 1844, and 1856, which has been reprinted in repeated editions in New York, translated into German (Stuttgart, 1844, 2 parts), and into French (Paris, 1848), and other books and pamphlets published under his auspices, secures public attention to them. It remains true, however, that the Orphanage has no endowment, and none of the usual machinery of support. Mr. Müller looks to God to supply the daily food of the thousands of children therein gathered, and to pay all the expenses of their care. Results have justified his confidence. Money comes in, sometimes at very critical moments, and the work is sustained. Besides the Narrative above referred to, Mr. Müller has published Jehovah Magnified: Addresses, London, 1876; Preaching Tours, 1883, etc. Cf. Mrs. E. R. PITMAN, George Müller, London, 1885. *

MULFORD, Elisha, LL.D. (Yale College, New Haven, Conn., 1872), Episcopalian; b. at Montrose, Susquehanna County, Penn., Nov. 19, 1833; d. at Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 9, 1885. He graduated from Yale College, New Haven, Conn., 1855; studied theology at Union Theological Seminary, New-York City, at Andover, Mass., and in Halle and Heidelberg; was ordained deacon 1859, priest 1862; had charges at Darien, Conn., 1861; South Orange, N.J., 1861-64; Friendsville, Penn., 1877-81. From 1864 to 1877 he was without charge at Montrose, Penn.; after 1881 he resided at Cambridge, where he lectured in the Episcopal Divinity School. He wrote The Nation, the Foundation of Civil Order and Political Life in the United States, New York, 1870, 9th ed. 1884; The Republic of God, an Institute of Theology, 1881, 7th ed. 1884.

The main feature of Dr. Mulford's theology, as presented in his Republic of God, is the union of the utmost liberty of philosophic thought with Christian dogmas. He urges the personality of God as the central principle of the universe, but in a form so comprehensive and elevated as to seem no longer incompatible with that conception of Deity, to which modern thought is approximating, of an infinite energy diffused throughout the universe, from whom all things proceed, and in whom they consist. The nature as well as the possibility of a revelation is based upon the postulate, that humanity is endowed potentially with personality as it exists in God. Revelation is the manifestation of the Divine personality in history, finding its highest and absolute expression in Christ. The organic relation of Christ to humanity involves the principle of the solidarity of the human race. Individualism, which has been a ruling idea in Protestant theology, is subordinated to the conception of man as essentially and primarily a member of the race from which in his history and fortunes he cannot be detached. The redemption in Christ extends to humanity as a whole, and is emphasized as an accomplished fact, as constituting a great objective epoch in man's spiritual history. It consist in ransoming man from bondage to the order of nature, and elevating him into the life of the spirit. While Dr. Mulford's thought is monistic, every trace of dualism or root of evil stronger than the love of God being disowned in virtue of the efficacy of the Incarnation, yet he affirms the reality and the deep significance of the conflict in human experience, finding its origin in the opposition between nature and spirit, not between matter and spirit as it is sometimes popularly represented. The Incarnation witnesses that the law of the course and constitution of nature has no dominion in the sphere of the spiritual; death, which reigns supreme in nature, is not the law of the spirit; the suffering in the kingdom of nature is transmutated by Christ into the principle of self-sacrifice, the essential condition of spiritual life and growth. In this struggle between the natural and the spiritual, humanity is supported by the indwelling Spirit of God, so that the course of human history becomes a process in which humanity is increasingly convicted of sin and of righteousness and of judgment. The judgment is interpreted, with the prophets of the Old Testament, as a constituent factor of life, whose result is purification and restoration. And this result is a necessary consequence of all judgment, whether here or hereafter, whether temporary or final; for death does not break the continuity of the spiritual order, and resurrection is not postponed to a distant future, but is immediate. But the "last things" naturally find no extensive treatment in a theology whose object is to enforce the reality of the life of the spirit in humanity, in this present world. To this life of the spirit, the Bible, the church, and the sacraments bear witness, by this also becoming divine agencies in the education of the race; but they are the symbols of a spiritual order, and not to be identified with the order itself. The Bible witnesses to a revelation, but is not the revelation; sacraments witness to a divine process of purification and feeding, but are not themselves the process; the church bears witness to a life of the spirit in humanity, which goes beyond its boundaries as an organization. So strong is the emphasis laid upon this point,—the reality of the life of the spirit,—that Dr. Mulford has devoted to it a chapter which he regarded as the most important in his book, entitled Christianity not a Religion and not a Philosophy, in which he disclaims the formalism of the one, and the tendency to abstraction of the other. It was the burden of his teaching and conversation, that revelation was co-efficient with the reason; that it was through experience, but not from experience; that theology was the interpretation of life,—an appeal to life closing every theological argument; that the true centre of theology must be the living, present God, not theories about him, not covenants or attributes or doctrines of anthropology. His thought has much that resembles Erskine and Maurice; and, as in the case of the latter, the difficulty in understanding him springs mainly from what is distinctive in his theology, rather than from obscurity of style. Among German theologians he was most indebted to Rothe, with whom he asserts the continuousness of the Incarnation, the abiding presence of the spiritual or essential Christ as distinguished from the historical Christ. With Hegel he maintains that principle of realism, which was also characteristic of the great theologians of the scholastic age, that the highest and necessary thought of man is identical with reality; as in the condensed expression which sums up his argument for the existence of God,—“the idea of God is in, with, and through the being of God.” But apart from his kinship with these and other thinkers, his work in theology has a character of its own. It was meditated and conceived in that inspiring epoch in American history which drew from him his first book, The Nation. As in that treatise he carried theology into statesmanship, finding in the solidarity of the state a divine personality, so in his later work he carried the national principle into theology, expanding the idea of the nation into the Republic of God,—the solidarity of mankind in the incarnate Christ.

NEWMAN, Albert Henry, D.D. (Mercer University, Macon, Ga., 1885), LL.D. (South-Western Baptist University, Jackson, Tenn., 1883), Baptist; b. in Edgefield County, S.C., Aug. 25, 1852; graduated at Mercer University, Macon, Ga., 1871, and Rochester (N.Y.) Theological Seminary, 1875; studied Oriental languages in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Greenville, S.C. (now Louisville, Ky.), 1875-76; became acting professor of church history in Rochester (N.Y.) Theological Seminary, 1877, and professor 1880; professor of church history and comparative religion in the Baptist (Theological) College, Toronto, Ontario, Can., 1881. His theological position is conservative. He translated (with additional notes) Immer's Hermeneutics of the New Testament, Andover, 1877; and has written numerous newspaper and review articles.

NEWMAN, Francis William, LL.D., layman; b. in London, June 27, 1805; educated at Worcester College, Oxford; graduated B.A. (double first-class), 1826; was fellow of Balliol, 1826-30, but resigned because unable conscientiously to subscribe to the Thirty-nine Articles, which was then requisite before obtaining a master's degree. From 1830 to 1834 he lived and travelled in the East; became classical tutor at Bristol College, 1834, and in Manchester New College, 1840; professor of Latin in University College, London, 1846. He resigned in 1863, and has since devoted himself to literature. He is the brother of Cardinal Newman, and, like him, has left the Church of England, in which he was born; but, unlike him, he has thrown away all religious belief. His writings are numerous. Of theological interest are, History of Hebrew Monarchy, London, 1847; The Soul, its Sorrows and Aspirations, 1849; Phases of Faith, Passages from my own Creed, 1850; Catholic Union, Essay toward a Church of the Future, 1854; Theism, Doctrinal and Practical, 1858. *

NEWMAN, His Eminence John Henry, cardinal deacon of the Roman-Catholic Church; b. in London, Feb. 21, 1801; educated at Trinity College, Oxford; graduated B.A. (second-class in classics), 1820; in 1822, fellow of Oriel College; in 1825, vice-principal of St Alban's Hall; in 1826, tutor of his college; in 1828 became incumbent of St. Mary's, Oxford, and chaplain of Littlemore in the neighborhood. He resigned his tutorship in 1832, but retained his incumbency until 1843, standing in the highest esteem for his noble mental and moral qualities, and wielding a great influence upon the undergraduates. He stood with Pusey as recognized leader of the High Church party. He engaged in the production of the Tracts for the Times, and wrote No. 90 (the last of the series), which appeared March, 1841, in which he endeavored to show how the Thirty-nine Articles may be interpreted in the Roman-Catholic sense. In 1842 he established at Littlemore a kind of monastery, of which he was head for three years. At length, in 1845, he took the step to which his avowed principles logically led him: seceded to the Church of Rome, and entered her priesthood. He was in 1847 appointed to found the Oratory of St. Philip Neri, in England; in 1854, rector of the newly founded Catholic University at Dublin; resigned in 1858, and returned to Birmingham to take charge of a school for the sons of Roman-Catholic gentry at Edgbaston, near that city. On May 12, 1879, Pope Leo XIII. created him a cardinal deacon of the Holy Roman Church. A collected edition of his writings appeared in London, 1870-79, 36 vols.; these include Parochial and Plain Sermons, 8 vols.; and three other volumes of sermons; five volumes of miscellanies; two religious novels, Loss and Gain, or The Story of a Convert, 1848; Callista, a Sketch of the Third Century, 1855; his autobiography, Apologia pro vita sua, 1864; Arians of the Fourth Century, 1833; Lectures on Justification, 1838; Two Essays on Biblical and on Ecclesiastical Miracles, 1843; Essay on the Development of Christian Doctrine, 1845; Difficulties of Anglicans, 1850, 2 vols.; Essay in Aid of the Grammar of Assent, 1870. He wrote "Lead, kindly Light," and other hymns. Cf. JENNINGS: Story of Cardinal Newman's Life, London, 1882.

PHILLIPS, Philip, Methodist layman; b. in Chautauqua County, N.Y., Aug. 13, 1834; brought up on the farm of a neighbor; early attracted attention by his singing, received his first musical education at the country singing-school, and later from Dr. Lowell Mason; began his first singing-school at Alleghany, N.Y., in 1853; conducted such schools subsequently in adjacent towns and cities. His parents were Baptists, and he was one himself from 1852 to 1860; but in 1860 he and his wife (whom he had married that year) joined the Methodist Church at Marion, O., and have ever since been in that denomination. He brought out his first musical publication, Early Blossoms, in 1860, and sold twenty thousand copies of it. In 1861 he moved to Cincinnati, and opened a music-store. His next book, Musical Leaves, Cincinnati, 1862, sold to the extent of seven hundred thousand copies. During the war he entered vigorously into the work of the Christian Commission, and raised much money for it by his Home Songs, and his personally conducted "services of song" in different parts of the country. He then issued The Singing Pilgrim, and since other books. In 1866 his music-store in Cincinnati was burned, and he moved his business to New York. In 1868 he first visited England, and successfully held services of song in all parts of the United Kingdom. He prepared The American Sacred Songster for the British Sunday-school Union, of which eleven hundred thousand copies have been sold. He has since held his praise and Bible-reading services in all parts of the world. He is the only man who has belted the entire globe with his voice in song, conducting 574 services during the journey. See PHILIP PHILLIPS: Song Pilgrimage around and throughout the World, with biographical sketch by Alexander Clark, Chicago, 1880, London, 1883.

PRIME, Edward Dorr Griffin, D.D. (Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Penn., 1857), Presbyterian; b. at Cambridge, N.Y., Nov. 2, 1814; graduated at Union College, Schenectady, N.Y., 1832, and at Princeton (N.J.) Theological Seminary, 1838; was pastor at Scotchtown, N.Y., 1839-51; American chaplain at Rome, winter of 1854-55; since 1853 has been co-editor of The New-York Observer. He has published Around the World, New York, 1872 (several editions); Forty Years in the Turkish Empire (memoirs of Dr. William Goodell), 1875, 6th ed. 1883.

PRIME, Samuel Irenæus, D.D. (Hampden Sidney College, Va., 1854) Presbyterian; b. at Ballston, Saratoga County, N.Y., Nov. 4, 1812; d. while on a vacation trip, at Manchester, Vt., Saturday, July 18, 1885. He was educated in the academy at Cambridge, N.Y., and at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.; graduated from the latter, 1829; and studied theology at Princeton (N.J.) Theological Seminary, 1832-33. He ever afterwards remained a firm friend and active supporter of his literary and of his theological alma mater. He was pastor at Ballston Spa 1833-35, and at Matteawan, N.J., 1837-40. He became editor of The New-York Observer in 1840, and continued to occupy this position till his death, being at the same time the chief proprietor of this old and influential family paper, which is read in all parts of the United States, as well as in many reading-rooms of Europe. He was for some time corresponding secretary and one of the directors of the American Bible Society, corresponding secretary of the Evangelical Alliance, president of Wells College, and a trustee of Williams College. He took an active and leading part in all the affairs of the Presbyterian Church, and in the Christian and philanthropic enterprises of the age. He repeatedly visited Europe. He wrote a number of books which had an extraordinary circulation at home and abroad (see list below). Among these we mention Travels in Europe and the East; The Bible in the Levant; The Alhambra and the Kremlin: Life of Samuel F. B. Morse; the Irenæus Letters (from The New-York Observer); and especially the Power of Prayer (1859, enlarged 1873), and Prayer and its Answer (1882). The Irenæus Letters are unique, and show an extraordinary faculty of clothing every-day topics and experiences with a fresh interest, and extracting from them lessons of practical wisdom. He left a third series, of an autobiographical character, which were published after his death (in The New-York Observer, 1886).

Dr. Prime was an indefatigable worker till within a few days of his death; and hardly a week passed without one of his Irenæus Letters, so highly prized by the readers of the Observer. His health, however, began to fail some years before his death.

With the Evangelical Alliance of America, founded in 1866, he was closely identified almost from the beginning. He attended the fifth General Conference at Amsterdam in 1867, read there the report on Religion in America, prepared by the late Dr. Henry B. Smith, and extended an invitation to the European Alliances to hold the sixth General Conference in the city of New York. The invitation was cordially accepted. On his return from Europe, he was elected one of the corresponding secretaries of the American Alliance, and served it in that capacity without any compensation till Jan. 28, 1884. He took a very prominent share in the preparations for the great New-York Conference, which, after two vexatious postponements, was held in the autumn of 1873. It is still well remembered as the first international and inter-continental religious meeting in America, and its influence for good reached every country on the globe. He advocated the cause of the Alliance, — which is the cause of Christian union and religious liberty, — in The Observer, and at many public meetings. He was very active in the anti-Romish controversy.

Dr. Prime was a wise counsellor, a man of an uncommon amount of common-sense, executive ability, and sound judgment, of quick wit, rich humor, and a hopeful temperament. He was eloquent in speech, and had a fluent, easy, and racy pen. Possessed of a generous heart, strong convictions, and large catholicity, he was one of the leaders of public opinion, and, altogether, one of the most untiring and useful writers and workers of his age and country. His genial humor, generous sympathy, and inexhaustible fund of illustrations and anecdotes, made him one of the most agreeable of friends and companions; and his company will long be missed in the social circles which he used to grace and delight with his presence.

On account of growing infirmities, he resigned his active secretaryship of the Evangelical Alliance, Jan. 28, 1884; but continued to attend the meetings regularly, and accepted the appointment of honorary corresponding secretary, which was offered him unanimously at the seventeenth annual meeting, Jan. 26, 1885. After his death a special meeting was called on Monday, July 27, where a suitable paper, prepared by Dr. King, was presented, adopted, and entered on the minutes. And on Tuesday, Jan. 5, 1886, an interesting memorial service in his honor was held at Association Hall, New-York City, in which Rev. Drs. R. S. Storrs (Congregationalist), E. Bright (Baptist), and J. M. Buckley (Methodist) made appreciative addresses to a large representative audience. See report in The New-York Observer, Jan. 14, 1886.

Many of his publications were anonymous; but he was the acknowledged author of the following volumes, most if not all of which have passed through several editions: The Old White Meeting-house, or Reminiscences of a Country Congregation, New York, 1845; Life in New York, 1845; Annals of the English Bible, abridged from Anderson, and continued to the Present Time, 1849; Thoughts on the Death of Little Children, 1850; Travels in Europe and the East, 1885; Power of Prayer (history of the Fulton-street prayer-meeting, New-York City), 1859; The Bible in the Levant; or, the Life and Letters of the Rev. C. N. Righter, Agent of the American Bible Society in the Levant, 1859; Letters from Switzerland, 1860; Memoirs of the Rev. Nicholas Murray, D.D. (Kirwan), Boston, 1862; Five Years of Prayer [in the Fulton-street prayer-meeting] with the Answers, New York, 1864; Walking with God, Life hid with Christ, 1872; Songs of the Soul, gathered out of many Lands and Ages, 1873; Alhambra and the Kremlin, Journey from Madrid to Moscow, 1873; Fifteen Years of Prayer in the Fulton-street Prayer-meeting, New York, 1873; Under the Trees, 1874; Life of Samuel F. B. Morse, 1875; Prayer and its Answer illustrated in the first Twenty-five Years of the Fulton-street Prayer-meeting, 1882; Irenæus Letters, 3 series 1882 (with portrait), 1885 (with sketch of Dr. Prime's life), 1886 (containing his autobiography in the form of letters).

With A. Kuenen and A. D. Loman he has, since 1867, edited the Theologisch Tijdschrift, Leiden, 1867 sqq. He is the author of De loco Paulino qui est de Δικαιώσει (his D.D. dissertation), Leiden, 1852; and in Dutch of "Christian Independence." Dordrecht, 1857; "The Heroes of History," 1862; "History of Protestantism," 1865-71, 3 vols.; "The Old Faith and the New" (against Strauss), 1873 (German trans. by F. Nippold, Leipzig, 1873); "State and Church," 1875; and numerous articles in different periodicals.

RAWLINSON, George, Church of England; b. at Chadlington, Oxfordshire, Eng., Nov. 23, 1815; entered Trinity College, Oxford; wrote the Denyer theological prize essay in 1842 and 1843; graduated B.A. (first-class in classics) 1838, M.A. (Exeter College) 1841; ordained deacon 1841, priest 1842; was fellow of Exeter College, 1840-46; tutor, 1842-46; sub-rector, 1844-45; curate of Merton, Oxfordshire, 1846-47; classical moderator at Oxford, 1852-54; public examiner, 1855-57, 1868-79, 1875-79; Bampton lecturer, 1859. Since 1861 he has been Camden professor of ancient history to the university; since 1872, a canon of Canterbury; since 1873, proctor in convocation. Canon Rawlinson is a moderate High Churchman, but anxious in no way to narrow the liberty of opinion which has historically been claimed and allowed within the Anglican communion. In politics he is a moderate (or Conservative) Liberal. He supported Mr. Gladstone in all his Oxford contests, and received his canonry from the Crown on the recommendation of Mr. Gladstone as prime minister. In the elections of 1885, however, he found himself unable to support the (advanced) Liberal candidates. He is well known as a speaker in the Convocation of Canterbury, at church congresses, and elsewhere. RIGGS, Elias, D.D. (Hanover College, Ind., 1853), LL.D. (Amherst College, Mass., 1871), Presbyterian; b. at New Providence, N.J., Nov. 19, 1810; graduated at Amherst College, Mass., 1829, and at Andover Theological Seminary, Mass., 1832; was missionary of the A. B. C. F. M. in Greece (at Athens and Argos), 1832-38; in Smyrna, Asia Minor, 1838-53; since that in Constantinople. He has made but one visit to the United States (in 1856). Being detained in New York for electrotyping an Armenian Bible, he taught Hebrew in the Union Theological Seminary (1857-58), and was invited to become professor in that department. The translation of the Scriptures into the Turkish language, after having engaged the labors of many others, was in 1873 placed by the British and Foreign Bible Society and the American Bible Society in the hands of a committee consisting at first of the Revs. W. G. Schauffler, D.D. (of the American Bible Society, formerly of the A. B. C. F. M.), George T. Herrick, Elias Riggs, D.D. (of the A. B. C. F. M.), and Robert H. Weakley (of the Church Missionary Society), as a result of whose labors, and those of native Turkish scholars, the entire Bible was published in both Arabic and Armenian characters in 1878. Experience having shown the need of retouching this version in a way to render it more intelligible to common readers, the same Bible societies, in 1883, consented to the organization of a larger committee (comprising so far as practicable the members of the former committee), and placed this work in their hands. The revised Turkish version, the work of this large committee, was issued 1886. Dr. Riggs is the author of A Manual of the Chaldee Language, containing a Grammar (chiefly translation of Winer), Chrestomathy, and a Vocabulary, Andover, Mass., 1832 (revised edition, New York, 1858, and since several editions); The Young Forester, a Brief Memoir of the Early Life of the Swedish Missionary Fjelstedt (Massachusetts Sabbath-school Society); Grammatical Notes on the Bulgarian Language, Smyrna, 1844; Grammar of the Modern Armenian Language, with a Vocabulary, Smyrna, 1847, second edition, Constantinople, 1856; Grammar of the Turkish Language as written in the Armenian Character, Constantinople, 1856; Translation of the Scriptures into the Modern Armenian Language, completed with the aid of native scholars, Smyrna, 1853 (reprinted in many editions in Constantinople and New York); Translation of the Scriptures into the Bulgarian Language, completed with the aid of native scholars throughout, and on the New Testament of the Rev. Dr. Albert L. Long (now professor in Robert College), Constantinople, 1871 (several editions, Constantinople and Vienna); A Harmony of the Gospels (in Bulgarian), Constantinople, 1880; A Bible Dictionary (in Bulgarian), 1884; minor publications, such as tracts, hymns, and collections of hymns, in Greek, Armenian, and Bulgarian.

He is one of the founders and honorary secretaries of the American branch of the Evangelical Alliance; and was sent three times (1869, 1872, 1873) as commissioner to Europe to make arrangements for the sixth General Conference of the Alliance, which, after a second postponement in consequence of the Franco-German war, was held in New York, October, 1873. He was also one of the Alliance delegates to the emperor of Russia in 1871, to intercede with him in behalf of the religious liberty of his subjects in the Baltic provinces, and prepared the official report. He was sent as a delegate to the General Conferences of the Alliance at Basel (1879), and at Copenhagen (1884). He attended, as a delegate, the meeting in London which organized the Alliance of the Reformed Churches in 1875, and its first General Council in Edinburgh, 1877; and was chairman of the programme committee for its second General Council in Philadelphia, 1880 (in behalf of which he made the arrangements in Europe). He is president of the American Bible-revision Committee, which he organized in 1871 at the request of the British Committee; and he was sent to England in 1875 to negotiate with the British revisers and university presses about the terms of co-operation and publication of the Anglo-American Revision. He attended several meetings of the British Committee in the Jerusalem Chamber, London, the last in July, 1884. In 1877 he made a tour through Bible lands, in 1884 through Scandinavia and Russia, in 1886 through Spain, France, and Germany.

His books are mostly historical and exegetical.

He was rector of the university in 1847, 1857, and 1877. He was the head of the critical school of

Dutch theologians, and the author of the so-called "modern theology," which arose about 1858, and which rejects the supernatural; looks upon Christianity as the religion of Jesus, rather than as founded upon Jesus; and God as a transcendent entity, devoid of all anthropomorphic attributes which would limit his infinitude, but the source of all force and all life. Among his numerous writings may be mentioned his theses for his doctorates, De Demosthenis eloquentiæ caractere, Utrecht, 1835, and De Dei erga hominem amore, principe religionis christianæ loco, 1836; his inaugural address at Leiden, De Religione christiana, sæ ipsa divinitatis in animo humano vindice, Leiden, 1843; his three rectoral addresses, De pugna theologiam inter ac philosophiam recto utriusque studio tollenda, 1847; De sacris literis, theologiæ nostræ ætate libere excolta, fontibus, 1857; and (in Dutch), "The rôle of Theology in the Dutch Universities as affected by the Law of 1876," 1877. His principal works, in Dutch and Latin, are, "Principles of the Theology of the Reformed Church," Leiden, 1848-50, 2 vols., 4th ed. 1861 (French trans. by C. B. Huet in the Revue de théologie of Strassburg, German trans. by F. Nippold in the Zts. f. hist. Theologie, 1865); Dogmatices christianæ initia, 1853-54, 2d ed. 1858; Geschiedenis der godsdienst en wijsbegeerte, 1853, 3d ed. 1863 (French trans. by A. Réville, Paris, 1861, 2d ed. 1864; German trans. by Redepenning, Elberfeld, 1863; English trans., London, 1870); "Historical and Critical Introduction to the New Testament," 1853, 2d ed. 1856 (German trans., Leipzig, 1856); "The Freedom of the Will," 1859 (French trans. in the Revue de théologie et philosophie, Lausanne, 1875); "The Causes of Contemporary Materialism," 1859 (French trans. by A. Réville in the Revue, Strassburg, 1860); "A Critical Study of the Gospel of John," 1864 (German trans. by Lang, Berlin, 1867); "The Oldest Witnesses to the Writings of the New Testament," 1866 (German trans. by C. Manchot, Bremen, 1867); "Supernaturalism en rapport with the Bible, Christianity, and Protestantism," 1867; "The Oldest Gospel: Critical Examination of the Relations of the Gospels of Matthew and Mark," 1868 (German trans. by Redepenning, Elberfeld, 1869); "The Formula of Baptism," 1869 (German trans. by Max Gubalke, Gotha, 1885); "The Pauline Gospel: a Critical Examination of the Gospel of Luke, and its Relation to Mark, Matthew, and the Acts," 1870 (German trans. by Redepenning, Elberfeld, 1881); "The Apostle John in Asia Minor," 1871 (German trans. by B. Spiegel, Berlin, 1872); "Did the Third Evangelist write the Acts?" 1873; Afscheidsrede bij het neerleggen van het hoogleerarsambt, 1881 (his address on retiring from his professorship, in which he reviews his theological development); Historisch-critische Bijdragen naar Aanleiding van de nieuwste Hypothese aangaande Jezus en den Paulus der vier Hoofdbrieven, 1882.

SECOND, Jacques Jean Louis, B.D., Lic. Theol., D.D. (all Strassburg, 1834, 1835, and 1836, respectively), Swiss Protestant theologian; b. at Plainpalais, near Geneva, Oct. 4, 1810; d. in Geneva, June 18, 1885. He was educated at the University of Strassburg and at Bonn, where he studied Oriental languages under Freytag. On his return to Geneva he founded (1836) a society for the exegetical study of the New Testament, which lasted until 1841; and gave free lectures upon Old-Testament exegesis in the university. From 1840 to 1864 he was pastor at Chênes-Bougeries; from 1862 to 1864 lectured upon Old-Testament introduction in Geneva University, where, from 1872 to his death, he was professor of Old-Testament exegesis. He made a trip through Palestine in 1873. His fame rests upon his translation of the entire Bible (Old Testament, Geneva, 1874, 2 vols.; New Testament, 1880, many subsequent editions), which he prepared at the request of the Venerable Company of Pastors of Geneva. It is a remarkably successful work. It was reprinted by the Oxford University Press, first edition fifty thousand copies. SEPP, Johann Nepomuk, Roman Catholic; b. at Tölz, Bavaria, Aug. 7, 1816; studied at Munich; travelled in the East, 1845-46; became professor of history at Munich, 1846; deposed and expelled from the city 1847, for his political opinions; re-instated, 1850; retired, 1867. He has been prominent in politics. He is the author of Das Leben Jesu, Regensburg, 1842-46, 5 vols., 2d ed. 1853-62, 6 vols.; Das Heidenthum und dessen Bedeutung für das Christenthum, 1853, 3 parts; Jerusalem und das Heilige Land, Schaffhausen, 1862-63, 2 vols., 2d ed. 1872-74; Thaten und Lehren Jesu mit ihrer weltgeschichtlichen Beglaubigung, 1864; Geschichte des Apostel vom Tod Jesu bis zur Zerstörung Jerusalems, 1865, 2d ed. 1866; Kritische Reformentwürfe beginnend mit der Revision des Bibelkanons, Munich, 1870; Das Hebräer Evangelium, 1870; Deutschland und der Vatikan, 1872; Görres u. seine Zeitgenossen, Nördlingen, 1877; Meerfahrt nach Tyrus zur Ausgrabung der Kathedrale mit Barbarossas Grab, 1878.

SERVICE, John, D.D. (Glasgow, 1877), Church of Scotland; b. at Campsie, Feb. 26, 1833; d. in Glasgow, March 15, 1884. He studied at the University of Glasgow irregularly from 1858 to 1862, but did not take a degree; was sub-editor of Mackenzie's Imperial Dictionary of Universal Biography, under P. E. Dove; married in 1859; became minister at Hamilton 1862, and there remained for ten months, when he resigned on account of ill-health, and went to Melbourne, Australia, where he spent two years (1864-66), leaving it for Hobart Town, Tasmania, where he was minister four years (1866-70). In both these colonial charges he exercised a considerable influence. In 1870 he returned home, and in 1872 was appointed to the parish of Inch, Wigtonshire, which he left in 1879 for Hyndland Established Church, Glasgow, of which he was incumbent when he died. His first literary work of mark was a novel, known as Novantia when it was published in Good Words, and afterwards as Lady Hetty, London, 1875, 3 vols. It is full of interesting pictures of Scotch village and rural life, in vivid contrast with wider colonial experiences. The hero is a Scotch clergyman; and the charm of the book lies, not so much in its plot, as in the fresh views of life under the varied conditions which had fallen to the author's lot. His volume Salvation, here and hereafter: Sermons and Essays (1876, 4th ed. 1885) gave him at once a foremost place among the leaders of what is known as the "Broad Church" in Scotland. Occasional magazine articles, journalistic contributions, and sermons appeared from his pen from time to time; but Salvation, here and hereafter, has only been followed by two posthumous volumes, — Sermons (1884) and Prayers (1885), — in both of which there is the same note of vigorous unconventionalism of opinion, and of deep spiritual life, which has arrested attention in his previous volumes. His personal influence was one element of his power, and the secret of its charm is easily understood from his books

WILLIAM JACK.

SEWALL, John Smith, D.D. (Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me., 1878), Congregationalist; b. at Newcastle, Me., March 20, 1830; graduated at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me., 1850; was commander's clerk, United-States Navy, in China, and in Commodore Perry's expedition (1853-54), 1850-54; graduated at Bangor (Me.) SEYMOUR, Right Rev. George Franklin, S.T.D. (Racine College, Wis., 1867), LL.D. (Columbia College, New-York City, 1878), Episcopalian, bishop of Springfield, Ill.; b. in New-York City, Jan. 5, 1829; graduated head of his class at Columbia College, New-York City, 1850, and from the General Theological Seminary, New-York City, 1854; was founder and first warden of St. Stephen's College, Annandale, N.Y., 1855-61; rector of St. Mary's Church, Manhattanville, 1861-62; of Christ Church, Hudson, N.Y., 1862-63; of St. John's, Brooklyn, N.Y., 1863-67; professor of ecclesiastical history in the General Theological Seminary, New-York City, 1865-79; dean of the same, 1875-79; consecrated first bishop of Springfield, Ill., June 11, 1878. In 1868 he was chosen by the clergy of Missouri several times as their bishop, and was elected bishop of Illinois in 1874, and twice bishop of Springfield in 1878 and 1879. He supervised the Greek text, and translated a portion never before rendered into English, of Fulton's Index Canonum, New York, 1871; Introduction to Papal Claims, 1882; many sermons, addresses, essays, and charges.

SHAFTESBURY, the Right Hon. Anthony Ashley-Cooper, Seventh Earl of, K.G., D.C.L. (Oxford, 1841), Church of England, layman; b. in London, April 28, 1801; d. at Folkestone, Oct. 1, 1885. He was educated at Christ Church, Oxford; graduated B.A. (first-class in classics) 1822, M.A. 1832; sat as Lord Ashley in the House of Commons, as member for Woodstock 1828-30, Dorchester 1830, Dorsetshire 1831-46, Bath 1847-51, when he succeeded his father in the peerage, and took his seat in the House of Lords. He supported the governments of Liverpool and Canning; was commissioner of the board of control under Wellington; was Lord of the Admiralty in Sir Robert Peel's administration of 1834-35, but declined to join it in 1841 because Peel would not support the Ten-hours Bill. It was not, however, as a statesman and politician that Lord Shaftesbury distinguished himself, but as a leader in philanthropy and religion. Throughout his long lifetime he labored assiduously for the benefit of the working-classes, among whom he was a great favorite; visiting them in their homes, and planning measures for their relief and elevation by reducing their hours of labor, improving their workshops, factories, and lodging-houses, caring for their children, and guarding them against vice. He was a consistent opponent of slavery, and a firm friend of the United States during the late civil war. In religious affairs he was a pronounced Evangelical, and the leader of that party in the Church of England. He was called upon to preside at innumerable meetings in Exeter Hall, and elsewhere, on behalf of all sorts of enterprises. His name was synonymous with every virtue, and a household word in Great Britain. He was president of many religious and philanthropic societies. Among them may be mentioned, The Church Pastoral Aid Society, The Surgical Aid Society, Field Lane Refuges and Ragged Schools for the Destitute and Homeless Poor, Ragged-school Union, The Victoria Institute, Society for the Conversion of the Jews, Society for the Relief of Persecuted Jews, The British and Foreign Bible Society. His funeral was held on Thursday, Oct. 8, in Westminster Abbey, and was attended by enormous crowds. Thousands stood outside in the drenching rain, unable to enter. Delegations came from the different societies which owed to him their prosperity, if not their existence. Noticeable among them was that of the Shoe-black Brigade. Upon his coffin the wreath from the Crown Princess of Germany lay side by side with one from the poor flower-girls of London. He was buried at the family seat of St. Giles, Dorsetshire. *

SHAW, William Isaac, Methodist; b. at Kingston, Can., April 6, 1841; graduated at Victoria University, Cobourg, Can., A.B. 1861, LL.B. 1864, at McGill University, Montreal, M.A. 1880; entered the ministry of the Wesleyan Methodist Church of Canada 1864, and after thirteen years' pastoral work became (1877) professor of exegesis and church history in the Wesleyan Theological College, Montreal. He is the author of Discussion on Retribution, Toronto, 1884; and various contributions to reviews.

SHEDD, William Greenough Thayer, D.D. SPURGEON, Charles Haddon, Baptist; b. at Kelvedon, Essex, Eng., June 19, 1834. He is the grandson of Rev. James Spurgeon, for many years pastor of the Independent Church at Stambourne, Essex, and son of Rev. John Spurgeon, who was also an Independent minister, and who until 1876 was pastor of the Independent Church, Upper Street, Islington, London. When just old enough to leave home, he was removed to his grandfather's, and there remained until 1841, when his father placed him in a school at Colchester, where he acquired a fair acquaintance with Latin, Greek, and French, and led his class at every examination. In 1848 he spent a few months in an agricultural college at Maidstone, conducted by a relative. In 1849 he became usher in a school at Newmarket kept by a Baptist. He then began to attend the Baptist Church. On Dec. 15, 1850, when home for a holiday, he was converted in the Colchester Primitive Methodist Chapel, under the preaching of an individual unknown, who chose for his text Isa. xlv. 22, emphasizing the words "Look . . . and be saved;" which words were exactly suited to relieve the mind of young Spurgeon, who had been for some time under profound conviction of sin, and who looked and was saved. He was immersed at Isleham, on Friday, May 3, 1851, and thus formally left the Independent connection in which he had been brought up. His works at once attested his faith. He commenced distributing tracts and visiting the poor in Newmarket. He addressed the Sunday-school children in the vestry of the Independent chapel. He wrote Antichrist and her Brood, in competition for a prize for an essay on popery. No prize was awarded, but he received a handsome gift from Samuel Morley as an encouragement. In 1851 he became usher in a school at Cambridge, entered the "Lay-preachers Association" in connection with the Baptist Church meeting in St. Andrew's Street, Cambridge, and the same year preached his first sermon from 1 Pet. ii. 7, at Teversham, a village four miles from Cambridge. He was then a boy of sixteen years, and wore a round jacket and broad turn-down collar. His success was so great that he was encouraged to hold evening services, after his school duties were over, in villages around Cambridge and Waterbeach; and this he did in thirteen stations, preaching sometimes in a chapel, sometimes in a cottage, or in the open air. In 1852 he became pastor at Waterbeach, and during the two years he was there the membership increased from forty to nearly a hundred. His father and others strongly advised him to enter Stepney (now Regent's Park) College to prepare more fully for the ministry. A meeting with Dr. Angus, the tutor, was arranged at the house of Mr. Macmillan, the publisher, at Cambridge; but although the two parties were in the house at the same time, through the failure of the servant to announce Mr. Spurgeon, Dr. Angus was not aware of his presence, and returned to London without seeing him. The college scheme was then given up. His address at the anniversary of the Cambridge Union of Sunday Schools, in 1853, greatly impressed a gentleman, who on the strength of it recommended him as a candidate for the then vacant Baptist Church of New Park Street, Southwark, London; and, after preaching for three months on probation, the small opposition to him when he first came had entirely vanished, and he accepted, April 28, 1854, a unanimous call to become their pastor. The church had been very prosperous, but had so dwindled down that only one hundred persons attended Mr. Spurgeon's first service, while the building seated twelve hundred. Before three months had passed, the chapel was crowded; within a year, it was necessary to enlarge it, and he preached in Exeter Hall during the progress of the alterations. But the enlarged building could not accommodate the crowds; and in 1856 he preached at the Royal Surrey Gardens Music Hall, which seated seven thousand persons. On Aug. 16, 1859, the cornerstone of the new Metropolitan Tabernacle was laid, and the building opened for service March 25, 1861. It seats about five thousand persons, with standing room for a thousand more; cost thirty-one thousand pounds, and was entirely paid for by the end of the opening five weeks' services. When the church removed from New Park Street, in 1861, it numbered eleven hundred and seventy-eight members; there were in 1885 upwards of fifty-five hundred. Mr. Spurgeon's only children, twin sons, are both preachers, — one in England, the other in New Zealand.

Besides preaching, not only in his own church twice every Sunday and on Thursday evening, and discharging the other duties of his pastorate, Mr. Spurgeon manages two important enterprises, the Pastors' College and the Stockwell Orphanage. Shortly after the commencement of his London pastorate, he gave his personal attention to the theological education of Thomas William Medhurst, a man of his own age, now a pastor at Landport; but finding that his time was too fully occupied to undertake the extra labor, he put Mr. Medhurst under the care of Rev. George Rogers, an Independent minister, who was long the principal and theological tutor of the Pastors' College. Other students soon presented themselves. These were at first assembled every week in Mr. Spurgeon's house for instruction in theology, pastoral duty, and other practical matters. From 1856 to 1861 the other lectures were delivered by Mr. Rogers in his own house; from 1861 to 1874, in the class-rooms under the Tabernacle; since 1874 in the New College buildings. Mr. Spurgeon lectures to the students every week.

The Stockwell Orphanage was incorporated in 1867, with an endowment of twenty thousand pounds, given by Mrs. Hillyard; and fifty orphan boys were taken in the following year. It now consists of twelve houses, and accommodates nearly five hundred children of both sexes, from six to fourteen years old. [Stockwell was formerly a suburb of London, but is now included in its limits.]

In connection with the church there are a Colportage Association (started in 1866, which through paid colporteurs sells religious books in neglected villages), and Mrs. Spurgeon's Book Fund (1876), the latter to supply poor ministers with free gifts of valuable books.

Mr. Spurgeon's remarkable constitution yielded, at length, to the tremendous strain of his manifold and multifarious duties and burdens, and since 1867 he has had frequent attacks of illness. In order that the interests of the church might not suffer, his brother, the Rev. James Archer Spurgeon, has been since 1868 co-pastor.

Mr. Spurgeon's pen has been very busy. Aside from his private correspondence, and that arising out of his various enterprises, he has each year since 1857 issued Spurgeon's Illustrated Almanac (containing short articles by him and others); in 1861 and 1862 was joint editor with Revs. D. Katerns and W. G. Lewis of The Baptist Magazine. He has personally conducted since Jan. 1, 1865, The Sword and the Trowel, a monthly magazine, in which he writes copiously, and which is in the interest of his church and of religion generally; since 1872, John Ploughman's Almanac, and has written the works mentioned below, and done much literary work besides. His first printed sermon, entitled Harvest Time, appeared in the Penny Pulpit, October, 1854; the second, God's Providence, shortly afterwards, and so a dozen before the end of the year. From the first week of 1855 one has been issued every week. Each of these receives his revision. The average sale is twenty-five thousand copies weekly. A few have approached a hundred thousand copies; two have exceeded it; and one on Baptismal Regeneration, preached in the summer of 1864, sold to the extent of a hundred and ninety-eight thousand copies, and was the occasion of a great controversy on the subject. The sermon Pictures of Life, and Birthday Reflections, in relation to his twenty-first birthday, is accompanied by his portrait, the first issued, and shows that he was then pale and thin.

His works embrace a great number of published sermons, more than nineteen hundred; e.g., in The Metropolitan Tabernacle Pulpit (containing his sermons which have been published weekly since the close of 1854), London, 1855 sqq., vol. i. 1855, vol. xxxi. 1885; The Pulpit Library, 1856-58, 3 vols.; Types and Emblems, 1875; Trumpet Calls to Christian Energy, 1875; The Present Truth, 1883 (these three volumes are made up of his Sunday and Thursday evening sermons); Farm Sermons, (nineteen discourses on farming), 1882; and the following, which together with the above have been reprinted in New York, translated into different languages, and circulated in thousands of copies; The Saint and his Saviour, 1857; Smooth Stones taken from Ancient Brooks (sentences from Thomas Brooks), 1859; Morning by Morning, or Daily Readings for the Family or the Closet, 1866, 100th thousand 1885; Our Own Hymn Book (used in many churches, has several original hymns and paraphrases of Psalms), 1866; Evening by Evening, or Readings at Eventide for the Family or the Closet, 1868, 75th thousand 1885; John Ploughman's Talks, or Plain Advice for Plain People, 1869, 340th thousand; The Treasury of David (containing an original exposition of the book of Psalms, a collection of illustrative extracts from the whole range of literature, a series of homiletical hints upon almost every verse, and lists of writers upon each psalm; in the preface to each successive volume, he acknowledges fully and heartily the important assistance rendered him by several persons in the researches necessary to carry out his plan), 1870-85, 7 vols. (thousands of copies sold, reprinted in United States); Feathers for Arrows, or Illustrations for Preachers and Teachers, from my Note-Book, 1870, 26th thousand 1885; The Interpreter, or Scripture for Family Worship (with running comments and suitable hymns), 1872; Lectures to my Students (a selection from addresses delivered to the students of the Pastors' College, Metropolitan Tabernacle), 1st series 1875, 30th thousand 1885; 2d series 1877, 16th thousand 1885; Commenting and Commentaries (two lectures to his students, with a catalogue of Bible commentaries and expositions), 1876; The Metropolitan Tabernacle: its History and Work (with thirty-two illustrations), 1876; John Ploughman's Pictures, or More of his Plain Talk for Plain People, 1880, 110th thousand 1885; Illustrations and Meditations, or Flowers from a Puritan's Garden, distilled and dispensed, 1883; The Clue of the Maze, 1884; My Sermon Notes (a selection from outlines of discourses delivered at the Metropolitan Tabernacle), 1884-87, 4 vols. (covering the whole Bible); Storm Signals (sermons), 1886; many minor works, articles, etc.

SYDOW, (Karl Leopold) Adolph, Ph.D., German Protestant; b. at Charlottenburg, Nov. 23, 1800; d. in Berlin, Oct. 22, 1882. He studied at Berlin from 1819 to 1823, and became an ardent disciple of Schleiermacher. In 1824 he became repentent; in 1828, preacher and ordinary teacher of the cadet corps at Berlin. In 1836 he was called by Frederick William III. to Potsdam as court preacher, and enjoyed also the friendship of Frederick William IV., who sent him in 1841, with others, to Great Britain, to study in London and elsewhere the ecclesiastical arrangements. In consequence he became a defender of the free church system; thus forfeited the king's favor, gave up his position at court, went in 1846 to Berlin as preacher of the New Church, and so remained until he was made emeritus in 1876. In 1872 he was deposed by the Brandenburg consistory, because in a public lecture he declared that Jesus was the legitimate son of Joseph and Mary. He appealed to the upper church council: twenty-six ministers of the province of Brandenburg and twelve of Berlin protested against his deposition; the theological faculty at Jena declared to Dr. Falk, the minister of religious affairs, that his deposition would "endanger the liberty of teaching;" and the council, while sharply rebuking him, ordered his reinstatement on the ground that the objectionable statement was extra-official. See Sydow's Aktenstücke, Berlin, 1873. He made, with F. A. Schulze, a translation of Channing's works, Berlin, 1850-55, 12 vols. His other publications consist of sermons, etc. See M. SYDOW: Dr. A. Sydow. Ein Lebensbild, Berlin, 1885. *

THAYER, Joseph Henry, D.D. (Yale College, New Haven, Conn., 1883; Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., 1884), Congregationalist; b. in Boston, Mass., Nov. 7, 1828; graduated at Harvard College, Cambridge, Mass., 1850, and at Andover Theological Seminary, Mass., 1857; was pastor at Salem, Mass., 1859-62; chaplain Fortieth Massachusetts Volunteers, 1862-63; professor of sacred literature in Andover Theological Seminary, 1861-82; and since 1884 professor of New-Testament criticism and interpretation in the theological department of Harvard University. He translated the 7th ed. (Lünemann's) of Winer's Grammar of the New-Testament Greek, Andover, 1869, last ed. 1884; A. Buttmann's Grammar of the New-Testament Greek, 1873, last ed. 1883; and with revision and enlargement the 2d ed. of Grimm's Wilke's Clavis Novi Testamenti, under title, A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament, New York, 1886.

THIERSCH, Heinrich Wilhelm Josias, D.D., Irvingite; b. in Munich, Bavaria, Nov. 5, 1817; d. at Basel, Dec. 3, 1885. He studied philology at Munich, chiefly with his father, an eminent Greek scholar; and theology at Erlangen and Tübingen; became privat-docent at Erlangen, 1839; professor of theology at Marburg, 1843; resigned in 1850, in order to labor in the interest of the "Catholic Apostolic Church," which then began to be organized in Germany by "Evangelists" from England. He had charge of a small Irvingite congregation at Augsburg, and afterwards at Basel. He was connected by marriage with the Zeller family of Beuggen, and with Bishop Gobat of Jerusalem, who married a sister of his wife.

Dr. Thiersch was a man of sincere and profound piety, of rare classical, theological, and general culture, an enthusiastic teacher, and might have become the successor of Neander in Berlin; but, in obedience to what he believed to be a divine call, he sacrificed a brilliant academic career to his religious convictions. He lived in poverty and isolation. He was lame; but had a very striking, highly intellectual and spiritual countenance, and an impressive voice and manner. He was the most distinguished German convert to Irvingism. He sincerely believed that the Lord had restored the offices and gifts of the Apostolic Church in the Irvingite community; and, notwithstanding the apparent failure of the movement, he adhered to it till his death.

His chief writings are, Versuch zur Herstellung des historischen Standpunkts für die Kritik der neutestamentlichen Schriften, Erlangen, 1845 (a very able book against the Tübingen school of Baur, who answered in Der Kritiker und der Fanatiker, in der Person des Herrn Heinrich W. J. Thiersch. Zur Charakteristik der neuesten Theologie, Stuttgart, 1846); Vorlesungen über Katholicismus und Protestantismus, Erlangen, 1846, 2 vols. (very able, written in an irenic spirit, and in elegant style); Die Kirche im apostolischen Zeitalter, Frankfurt-am-Main, 1852, 3d ed. 1879 (English trans. by Carlyle the Irvingite, London, 1852); Ueber christliches Familienleben, 1854, 7th ed. 1877; Döllinger's Auffassung des Urchristenthums beleuchtet, 1861; Die Gleichnisse Christi, Frankfurt-am-Main, 1867, 2d ed. 1875; Die Bergpredigt Christi, Basel, 1867, 2d ed., Augsburg, 1878; Die Strafgesetze in Bayern zum Schutz der Sittlichkeit, 1868; Luther, Gustav Adolf und Max I. von Bayern, Nördlingen, 1868; Das Verbot der Ehe innerhalb der nahen Verwandtschaft nach der heiligen Schrift und nach den Grundsätzen der christlichen Kirche, 1869; Die Genesis, Basel, 1869 (English trans., The Book of Genesis, London, 1878); Ueber den christlichen Staat, 1875; Christian Heinrich Zeller's Leben, Basel, 1876, 2 vols.; Die Anfänge der heiligen Geschichte, nach dem 1. Buche Moses betrachtet, 1877; Ueber die Gefahren und die Hoffnungen der christlichen Kirche, 1877, 2d ed. 1878; Blicke in die Lebensgeschichte des Propheten Daniel, 1884; Inbegriff der christlichen Lehre, 1886 (his last work, which was published after his death, and contains a manual of Christian doctrine and Christian life which he used in his catechetical instruction). PHILIP SCHAFF.

THOMAS, David, D.D. (Waynesburg College, Penn., 1862), Congregationalist; b. at Hollybush-Vatson, near Tenby, Pembrokeshire, South Wales, Feb. 1, 1813; educated at Newport Pagnel, now Cheshunt College, Buckingham, under the Rev. T. Bull, the friend and neighbor of Cowper the poet; entered the Independent ministry, 1841; was minister of Stockwell Independent Church, London, 1845-74. He founded in 1855 the National Newspaper League Company, for cheapening and improving the daily press, which numbered ten thousand members, and of which he was chairman; also the Working Men's Club and Institute Unions, 1861; originated the University for Wales in 1862, when the first letters and resolutions were sent out; the University College was opened at Aberystwith, March 11, 1877. He comes of an old family who have resided upon the same property for upwards of three hundred and fifty years. His grandfather lived to a hundred years; great-grandfather to a hundred and twenty years; great-uncle to a hundred and twelve years. He is a Broad Churchman, in close theological sympathy with Horace Bushnell of United States of America, Dean Stanley of Westminster, F. W. Robertson of Brighton, and Bishop Fraser of Manchester. In all his writings he recognizes the fact, that as Christ is the only revealer of absolute truth, he is not to be interpreted by the Old-Testament writers or by the apostles, but they are all to be interpreted by him. He is the author of The Crisis of Being, London, 1849; The Core of Creeds, 1851; The Progress of Being, 1854; The Biblical Liturgy, 1855; Journalism and the Pulpit, 1857; Unreasonableness of People in Relation to the Pulpit, 1857; Resurrections: Thoughts on Duty and Destiny, 1863; The Genius of the Gospel: a Homiletical Commentary on St. Matthew, 1864; The Augustine Hymn-Book, 1865; The Minister, the Parent, and the Church: Inaugural Addresses, Bristol, 1866; The Philosophy of Happiness (including Crisis and Progress of Being), London, 1869; Homiletic Commentary on Acts of the Apostles, 1869; The Practical Philosopher: a Daily Monitor, 1873; Problemata Mundi, the Book of Job considered, 1878; editor of The Homilist, 1851-82; 50 vols.; and since of The Homilistic Library, in which have appeared his Book of the Psalms, exegetically and practically considered, 1882-83, 3 vols.; The Genius of the Fourth Gospel, 1884.

He was Hulsean lecturer at Cambridge, 1845-46; chaplain to the bishop of Oxford (Wilberforce), 1847-64; professor of divinity in King's College, London, 1847-58. He was a devout and conservative High Churchman of the best type, but his theological writings are free from sectional bias. He had no special administrative ability, and therefore was only moderately successful as archbishop. He threw the weight of his influence against disestablishment. As a writer, he showed choice biblical, patristic, and modern Anglo-German learning, original thought, and a reverential and truly Christian spirit. He is one of the chief authorities on the English language. He was the author of The Story of Justin Martyr, and other Poems, London, 1835, 5th ed. 1862; Sabbaton, Honor Neale, and other Poems, 1838; Elegiac Poems, 1841; Notes on the Parables of our Lord, 1841, 15th ed. 1886; Poems from Eastern Sources, 1842; Genoveva and other Poems, 1842; Sermons, Cambridge, 1843; Exposition of the Sermon on the Mount, from St. Augustine, London, 1844, 4th ed. 1881; The Fitness of Holy Scripture for unfolding

the Spiritual Life of Men (Hulsean Lectures for 1845), Cambridge, 1846; Christ the Desire of all Nations, or the Unconscious Prophecies of Heathendom (Hulsean Lectures for 1846), 1846; together, 5th ed. 1880; Sacred Poems for Mourners, London, 1846; Notes on the Miracles of our Lord, 1846, 13th ed. 1886; Sacred Latin Poetry, 1849, 3d ed. 1874; The Star of the Wise Men, 1850; On the Study of Words, 1851, 18th ed. 1882; On the Lessons in Proverbs, 1853, 7th ed. 1879; Synonymes of the New Testament, Cambridge, 1854, 2d series 1863: together, 10th ed. 1886; Alma and other Poems, 1854; English, Past and Present, London, 1855, 11th ed. 1881; Life's a Dream: the Great Theatre of the World, from the Spanish of Calderon, with an Essay on his Life and Genius, 1856, 2d ed. 1880; Sermons, 1856; On the Authorized Version of the New Testament, in Connection with some Recent Proposals for its Revision, 1858 (reprinted by Dr. Schaff, with Ellicott and Lightfoot's treatises, New York, 1873); A Select Glossary of English Words used formerly in Senses differing from their Present, 1859, 5th ed. 1879; Sermons preached in Westminster Abbey, 1860; Commentary on the Epistles to the Seven Churches in Asia, 1861, 4th ed. 1883; Subjection of the Creature to Vanity (sermons), Cambridge, 1863; Two Sermons, 1864; Gustavus Adolphus: Social Aspects of the Thirty Years' War, 1865, 2d ed. 1872; Poems, collected and arranged anew, 1865, 9th ed. 1886, 1 vol.; Studies on the Gospels, 1867, 4th ed. 1878; Shipwrecks of Faith (3 sermons), 1867; A Household Book of English Poetry, selected and arranged, 1868; Plutarch: his life, Lives and Morals, 1873, 2d ed. 1874; Lectures on Mediæval Church History, 1877, 2d ed. 1879. *

TULLOCH, Very Rev. Principal John, D.D. (St. Andrew's, 1854), LL.D. (Glasgow and Edinburgh, 1884), Church of Scotland; b. near Tibbermuir, Perthshire, June 1, 1823; d. at Torquay, Eng., Feb. 13, 1885. He was educated at St. Andrew's and Edinburgh; became parish minister at Dundee 1845, and at Keltins, Forfarshire, 1849; principal and primarius professor of divinity in St. Mary's College, St. Andrew's University, 1854; and senior principal of the university, 1860. His theological standpoint was thus defined by himself: "Broad evangelical. The aim is to see all Christian truth first in its pure historical form, — the mind of Christ, the thought of St. Paul, the teaching of St. James; then its living relation to the Christian consciousness, — what man needs, what God gives. The historic method, rightly applied, is the primary key to all Christian truth; and the renovation of theology is through this method bringing all Christian ideas freshly into the light of consciousness." He studied theology in Germany in 1847-48 and 1863-64. He was "especially attracted by Neander, and much interested by the problems raised by the Tübingen school and the writings of F. C. Baur, and greatly attracted in later years by Dean Stanley's historical writings and Bishop Lightfoot's critico-historical essays." He was an ardent student of literature and philosophy, and his writings are very highly prized. He first came into notice when in Dundee, by his frequent contributions in the Dundee Advertiser; but later by his elaborate articles in The North-British Review, The British Quarterly, and Kitto's Journal of Sacred Literature. Two of his articles — one on Carlyle's Life of Sterling (North-British Review, vol. iv., 1845), the other on Bunsen's Hippolytus (the same, vol. xix., 1853) — attracted wide attention; and the latter so pleased Baron Busen that he successfully exerted his influence to press the claim of Mr. Tulloch to the then vacant principalship in St. Mary's College. His appointment when barely thirty years old to this position, one of the most dignified and responsible connected with the Established Church of Scotland, was naturally a great surprise and occasion of unfavorable remark. But he soon proved his superior fitness for the office. In 1856 he was appointed one of the examiners of the Dick bequest, and so continued until his death. In 1858 he was deputed by the General Assembly of the Church to formally open the Scotch Presbyterian Church in Paris, and preached there during the summer. In 1859 he was appointed one of her Majesty's chaplains for Scotland, and often preached before the Queen at Crathie. In 1862 he became deputy clerk of the General Assembly, in 1875 succeeded Rev. Dr. Cook of Haddington as clerk, and in 1878 was elected moderator. The regard in which he was held, and the position he occupied, are authoritatively expressed in the following memorial passed by the senatus of the University of St. Andrew's immediately after his death: —

"The senatus record their deep sense of the severe loss the university has sustained in the death of its honored and revered head, — the Very Rev. Principal Tulloch, who for thirty-two years held the offices of principal and primarius professor of divinity in St. Mary's College, and for twenty-six years the office of senior principal in the university. During the whole of this period,

Principal Tulloch devoted himself to the interests of the colleges and university with unwearied zeal and energy; and the successful management of university affairs under critical circumstances was largely due to his wisdom and tact, his sound public judgment, commanding influence, and great executive ability. As chairman of the university council, Principal Tulloch's thorough knowledge of academic questions, and capacity for directing their discussion into useful channels, were equally conspicuous. As vice-chancellor, Principal Tulloch represented the university on public occasions with unflinching dignity and distinction. As a permanent member of the university court, his knowledge of official procedure, and scrupulous care and impartiality in dealing with judicial questions, were, in its early years, of the greatest service in helping to define the powers, and develop the functions, of the newly established tribunal; while to the end they constituted an important element in guiding the deliberations of the court, and giving weight to its decisions. As a university reformer, Principal Tulloch combined an enlightened regard for the past with the keenest perception of the newest forces and requirements of social and national life. Having carefully studied the university system of the country, and been familiar with its working for nearly half a century, he was supremely anxious that any changes initiated by the universities, or undertaken by the legislature, should be fully considered in the interest of the public, so as to extend the usefulness, and strengthen the national position, of the universities. While keeping up the standard of attainment, he felt that it was desirable to give greater elasticity to the curriculum, and thus make the whole system more widely fruitful in solid educational results. As a member of the Central Board of Education, Principal Tulloch was engaged for several years in the re-organization and extension of primary schools, and in various efforts for the multiplication of good secondary schools. The removal of so able, earnest, and experienced an adviser and authority is a heavy loss, alike to the universities of which Principal Tulloch was the senior representative, and to the educational interests of the country at large. The senatus cannot but feel, indeed, that the calamity they mourn affects every department of the nation's higher life.

"The Church of Scotland has lost in Principal Tulloch her most eloquent and courageous leader; her wisest and most far-sighted statesman; her most accomplished, large-hearted, and generous-minded representative. The loss falls with almost equal weight on Scottish thought, Scottish literature, and Scottish public life, — in all of which Principal Tulloch was deeply interested, and in all of which he took so active and so influential a part. But it is in relation to the higher and more distinctive work of his life as a Christian thinker and constructive theologian, that Principal Tulloch's death will be most widely felt and deeply mourned. His profound religious convictions, the spiritual elevation of his thought, his living sympathy with the past as affording light and guidance for the present, his powers of luminous insight and interpretation, the breadth of his literary culture, and his command of a graceful and impressive style — all conspired to give Principal Tulloch's matured studies in Church history and Christian philosophy a unique character, a high and permanent value. This has been widely recognized on both sides of the Atlantic, — wherever, indeed, the English language is spoken. Critics and thinkers of widely different schools have felt and acknowledged how much Principal Tulloch's writings have done to harmonize the principles of religious life with the movements of modern thought, and thus to bring the spirit of Christianity into closer relation with the spirit of the age. In this aspect of his work, Principal Tulloch's death in the plenitude of his powers cannot but be regarded as a serious national loss. Alike, therefore, in the variety and extent, the high character and lasting value, of his labors, the senatus feel that Principal Tulloch will occupy a foremost place in the history of the time, and has shed an undying lustre on the university he adorned. In placing on record this slight tribute to his worth, the members of the senatus cherish with pride and gratitude the inspiring example of their late principal's noble character and life, and will ever hold in affectionate regard the memory of his generous nature, his goodness of heart, the warmth and fidelity of his attachments, his loyal and kindly qualities as a colleague and a friend."

Principal Tulloch was the author of Theism (second Burnett prize essay), Edinburgh, 1855; Leaders of Reformation, 1859, 3d ed. 1883; English Protestants and their Leaders, 1861; Beginning Life, 1862, 15th thousand 1880; The Christ of the Gospels, and the Christ of Modern Criticism (against Renan), 1864; Rational Theology and Christian Philosophy, 1872, 2 vols., 2d ed. 1873; Facts of Religion and Life (sermons preached before the Queen), 1876; Pascal, 1876, 2d ed. 1882; The Christian Doctrine of Sin, 1877; Modern Theories in Philosophy and Religion, 1884; Movements of Religious Thought in Britain during the Nineteenth Century, 1885; numerous contributions to the newspaper-press and to the reviews.

1860-64); corresponding secretary of the Western Freedmen's Aid Committee, 1863-66; corresponding secretary of the Freedmen's Aid Committee of the Methodist-Episcopal Church, 1866-67; presiding elder of the East Cincinnati district, 1867-68; agent of the Western Methodist Book Concern, Cincinnati, O., 1868-84; elected bishop, May 15, 1884. Since 1847 he has been identified with temperance reform. He was a prominent anti-slavery man; established in 1857 at Quindaro, Kan., a paper to promote Free State principles; was a member of the Topeka (Kan.) Legislature, and of the Leavenworth Constitutional Convention, and author of its address to the country; member of the Board of Education, Cincinnati; chairman of the Library Board after re-organization of the Public Library, in which he was active; sent teachers to the contrabands in the Mississippi Valley, early in 1863, and has been ever since officially connected with educational work in the South. He was a delegate to the General (Methodist-Episcopal) Conferences of 1863, 1872, and 1876; and to the Methodist Ecumenical Council, London, Eng., 1881.

WALDENSTRÖM, Paul Petter, Swedish Lutheran Church; b. at Luleå, a town in the northern part of Sweden, July 20, 1838; graduated as Ph.D. at the University of Upsala 1863; ordained 1864; became head master of gymnasium at Umeå 1864, and of that at Gefle 1874. He came into conflict with Lutheran Orthodoxy in 1872, upon the doctrine of the atonement, in regard to which he holds that the reconciliation through Christ is of us to God, not of God to us; not per gratiam propter Christum salvatio, but propter gratiam per Christum. The subject is God, the Father of Christ; the source is the love of God; the object is the whole world; the mediator is Christ, the only begotten God, the Son of God; the end is the restitution of men to God, not the redemption of God to men. His subsequent writings in defence of his position have excited great interest, and stirred up a great controversy. He is also a leader in the Free-Church movement in Sweden, and in consequence frequently prosecuted by the Upsala Consistory. He resigned his clerical position in the State Church in 1880. For baptizing two children in September, 1884, he was prosecuted by the Consistory, but by appeal to the king he was cleared. He is a member of the Swedish Parliament. [His eloquence renders him an attractive and powerful preacher, and the Free-Church movement owes much to him. See M. W. MONTGOMERY, A Wind from the Holy Spirit in Sweden and Norway, New York, 1884.] Of his numerous and highly popular writings, all in Swedish, may be mentioned, Sermons over the New Pericopes of the Swedish Church, Stockholm, 1868-80, 4 vols.; The Lord is Holy, 1875 (reprinted in Chicago, Ill.), and translated into German (Leipzig, 1877); The Eternal Decree of Election, 1880 sqq., 3 vols.; The History of Infant-Baptism; The New Testament, newly translated, with Notes, 1883 sqq.

WARREN, Israel Perkins, D.D. (Iowa College, Grinnell, Io., 1868), Congregationalist; b. at Bethany, Conn., April 8, 1814; graduated at Yale College, New Haven, Conn., 1838; principal of Cromwell (Conn.) Academy, 1838-39; studied at Yale Theological Seminary, 1839-40; became pastor at Granby, Conn., 1842; Mt. Carmel, Conn., 1846; Plymouth, Conn., 1851; corresponding secretary of American Seamen's Friend Society, New-York City, 1856; secretary and editor of the American Tract Society, Boston, 1859; editor and book publisher in Boston, 1870; editor of The Christian Mirror, of Maine, October, 1875; editor and proprietor of the same, Portland, Me., April 1, 1877. In 1859, when the controversies on slavery, which at length eventuated in the civil war, were at their height, the American Tract Society of Boston withdrew from its connection with the society of the same name at New York, and commenced a distinct publication work of its own. Mr. Warren, who had had some editorial experience in connection with his work for seamen, was chosen secretary of the Boston society, in charge of its publication department. In this capacity he served eleven years, until May, 1870, when, the causes which led to the separation of the two societies having disappeared, it was deemed advisable to re-unite them, and transfer the publishing work and material of the Boston society to that of New York. During this period a very large number of tracts, books, and periodicals, were issued under his editorial care. The Tract Journal and Child at Home were published for families, and for several years The Sabbath at Home, an illustrated monthly magazine. The Christian Banner was distributed in great numbers in the army and navy. The Freedman and The Freedman's Journal were small monthly sheets for the use of the emancipated blacks. About five hundred different tracts and pamphlets were issued, and five hundred and twenty-five volumes of various sizes, making an aggregate, including periodicals, of 55,672,276 copies. In addition to the ordinary uses of this class of publications, there was a very wide distribution among the soldiers and sailors in service; and another, of matter provided specially for them, among the freedmen, to aid in the incipient stages of their education. The entire cost of these publications, from May 1, 1859 to May 1, 1870, was $1,002,997.06. Dr. Warren is the author of the following publications: Sermons, On Female Education (Hartford, 1852), On the Death of Mrs. Mary Langdon of Plymouth (June, 1853), On Finished Work: Pastoral Valedictory (January, 1856). Tracts and pamphlets, A Corpse in a Ball-dress (Boston, 1859), The Pemberton Mill (1860), How to Begin to be a Christian (1861), A Happy New Year (1864), The Flag of our Country (1864), The Death of the Soul (1867, pp. 28), How to Repent (1867, pp. 31), How to Believe (1867, pp. 32). Bound volumes, The Seamen's Cause: embracing the History, Results, and Present Condition of the Efforts for the Moral Improvement of Seamen, New York, 1858; The Sisters, a Memoir of Elizabeth H., Abbie A., and Sarah F. Dickerman, Boston, 1859 (often reprinted); Sadduceism, a Refutation of the Doctrine of the Annihilation of the Wicked, 1860, pp. 66 (the same work rewritten and republished under the title, The Wicked not Annihilated, 1866, pp. 76); The Cross-Bearer, a Vision, 1861; The Picture Lesson-Book, 1861 (designed for the use of the refugee slaves in the camps, and believed to be the first book ever printed for the special benefit of that class), pp. 32; Life of Governor Briggs (for distribution among the soldiers), 1861, pp. 48; Snow-Flakes: A Chapter from the Book of Nature, 1863; The Freedman's Primer, or First Reader, 1864, pp. 64; The Freedman's Second Reader, 1864, pp. 160; The Christian Armor, 1864; The Cup-Bearer, 1865; The Freedman's Third Reader, 1865, pp. 264; The Freedman's Spelling-Book, 1865, pp. 160; The Sabbath at Home: An Illustrated Religious Magazine for the Family, 1867-69, 3 vols.; The New Testament, with Notes, Pictorial Illustrations, and References; vol. i., The Four Gospels, with a Chronological Harmony, 1867; the same work, enlarged by the addition of the Acts of the Apostles, 1871; Jerusalem, Ancient and Modern, a Descriptive Book of Selous' two Pictures of that City, containing a detailed account of nearly two hundred points of interest in the pictures, a résumé of the recent explorations in the city, and outlines of its topography, history, and antiquities, 1873, pp. 64; The Three Judges, Story of the Men who beheaded their King (with an introduction by Rev. Leonard Bacon, D.D., New York, 1873; Chauncey Judd, or The Stolen Boy of the Revolution, 1874; The Parousia, A Critical Study of the Scripture Doctrines of Christ's Second Coming, his Reign as King, the Resurrection of the Dead, and the General Judgment, Portland, Me., 1879, 2d ed. WHITON, James Morris, Ph.D. (Yale College, New Haven, Conn., 1861), Congregationalist; b. in Boston, Mass., April 11, 1833; educated in Boston Latin School, and graduated at Yale College 1853; was rector of Hopkins Grammar School, New Haven, Conn., 1854-64; pastor of the First Congregational Church, Lynn, Mass., 1865-69; of the North Congregational Church, Lynn, 1869-75; principal of Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass., 1876-78; pastor of First Congregational Church, Newark, N.J., 1879-85; acting pastor of the Trinity Congregational Church, Tremont, New-York City, 1886. His theological standpoint is that of a Trinitarian Christian evolutionist; regarding the Trinity, interpreted through the principle of the Divine immanency as the biblical symbol which sets forth the being and the relation of God to the world, as the fundamental and comprehensive article of faith. Creation, revelation, and judgment are eternal Divine processes, all manifested in the world of the past, present, and future. Redemption is essentially a constructive rather than a reconstructive process. Atonement is the Divine process of the reconciliation of man to God, by an expiatory satisfaction — mediated through the historical experience of the Christ, producing an adequate repentance — to that which is of God in conscience. The norm of conscience for faith, duty, and hope, is in the Holy Scriptures, whose authority as a divine revelation centres in the living Word of God, the Christ, speaking therein. The promised advent of the Christ is now being progressively realized in the life of the world that now is, and the resurrection likewise in the life of the world to come. He is the author of Latin Lessons, Boston, 1860; Greek Lessons, New York, 1861; Select Orations of Lysias, Boston, 1875, 2d ed. 1881; "Is Eternal Punishment Endless?" 1876, 2d ed. 1877 (maintaining that endless punishment is not decisively revealed in the New Testament: it raised a question as to his further fellowship in the Congregational body, which was decided in his favor by a council at Newark, 1879, — twenty-eight to three, cf. stenographic report in The Congregationalist, April 12, 1879); Six Weeks' Preparation for Reading Cæsar, 1877, 3d ed. 1886; Auxilia Vergiliana (pamphlet), 1878, 2d ed. 1886; Essay on the Gospel according to Matthew, 1880; The Gospel of the Resurrection, 1881, reprinted in London, Eng., under title Beyond the Shadow, 1884; Early Pupils of the Spirit (pamphlet), Lond., 1884; Three Months' Preparation for Reading Xenophon (published in conjunction with his daughter Mary B. Whiton), N. Y., 1885; The Evolution of Revelation (pamphlet), 1885; The Divine Satisfaction, London, 1886; frequent contributions to the religious journals, occasional articles in The New-Englander, etc.

WILLIAMS, George, Church of England, layman, the founder of the Young Men's Christian Association; b. at a farmhouse in the parish of Dulverton, Somersetshire, Eng., Oct. 11, 1821. Having completed his education, he began his business-life at Bridgewater. There he was converted in 1837, and immediately endeavored to lead his associates to Christ. In this he was so successful that a considerable number professed religion. In 1841 he became a junior assistant in the dry-goods establishment of Messrs. George Hitchcock & Co., 72 St. Paul's Churchyard, London. Finding that the majority of his fellows (there were some 120 in all) were indifferent to religion, while many were licentious, in 1843 he induced a few of the spiritually minded assistants to hold with him, at regular intervals, a prayer-meeting in a bedroom of the establishment, — it being then customary for clerks to occupy rooms in the business houses where they were employed, — for the conversion of their fellow-clerks; and out of that meeting originated the Young Men's Christian Association movement. Mr. George Hitchcock, their principal, who had been converted since Mr. Williams came, having mentioned these meetings to his friend Mr. W. D. Owen, proprietor of a large drapery establishment in the West End, the latter spoke of them to Mr. James Smith, his principal assistant, who immediately commenced similar meetings amongst the young men. In the spring of 1844, Mr. Williams was impressed with the importance of introducing similar meetings in all the large establishments of London. He broached the subject, first of all, to his most intimate friend and fellow-assistant, the late Mr. Edward Beaumont, on a Sunday evening in the latter part of May, 1844. The following week, after the prayer-meeting, three or four of the most zealous remained behind for conversation upon the subject; and it was then resolved to call a meeting of all the religious young men of the establishment, to meet on Thursday, June 6, 1844, to consider the importance and practicability of establishing a society for improving the spiritual condition of young men engaged in the drapery and other trades. At this meeting the following persons were present: Messrs. George Williams, C. W. Smith, James Smith (from Mr. Owen's, by invitation of Mr. Williams), Norton Smith, Edward Valentine, Edward Beaumont, — Glasson, Francis John Cockett, Edward Rogers, John Harvey, John C. Symons, William Creese. Mr. James Smith was chosen chairman; Mr. Valentine, treasurer; and Messrs. Symons and Creese, secretaries. It was decided to form the projected society; and Mr. C. W. Smith, being delegated to choose a name for it, suggested among others that of The Young Men's Christian Association, which was afterwards adopted, Thursday, July 4. Mr. Williams being a young man, and merely a draper's assistant, modestly kept himself in the background in the early meetings of the Association, yet in the absence of the first chairman was always asked to preside; but to him, under God, belongs the credit of being the founder of that organization which has spread all over the world, and to it he has freely given his time and his means. He was the treasurer of the parent association from 1863 to 1885, succeeding Mr. Hitchcock; and is now president, succeeding the late Earl of Shaftesbury. He was taken by Mr. Hitchcock into partnership, and now is the head of the firm of Hitchcock, Williams, & Co., in which establishment he was a clerk. Besides the Young Men's Christian Association, Mr. Williams is the president of the Commercial Travellers' Christian Association, the Christian Community, the Young Men's Foreign Missionary, and of several other societies. He takes an active interest in the British and Foreign Bible Society, the London City Mission, the Sunday-school Union, the Bishop of London's Diocesan Council for Young Men, the Young Women's Christian Association, and many others.

The success of the Young Men's Christian Association was assured from the start. Its membership was twelve on June 6; in five months the association numbered seventy, each of whom had been carefully examined as to his Christian zeal before admittance, and religious services had been founded by it in ten drapers' establishments. On March 6, 1845, the membership was 160; on Nov. 5, 1846, the second annual meeting, branch associations in different places in London and in other cities were reported. In 1848, 480 members in London, and 1,000 in all, were reported. In 1849 the Earl of Shaftesbury became president, and so continued until his death, Oct. 1, 1885, when he was succeeded by Mr. Williams. In September, 1886, it was reported that there were 3,370 branch associations throughout the world, with nearly 200,000 members and associates. For an interesting and trustworthy history of the parent association, see George J. Stevenson's Historical Records of the Young Men's Christian Association from 1844 to 1884, London, 1884; for a brief account of the movement in general, see article, Young Men's Christian Association, in the Schaff-Herzog Encyclopaedia, vol. iii. 2564-2566.

WILLIAMS, William R., LL.D. (Union, 1859), S.T.D. (Columbia College, New-York City, 1837); b. in New-York City, Oct. 14, 1804; d. there, April 1, 1885. He graduated, head of his class, at Columbia College, New-York City, 1822; studied law for three years in the office of Peter A. Jay, and, on being admitted to the bar, became his partner, and practised law for two years, when the failure of his health compelled him to break off, and go to Europe. On his return he was converted, and, abandoning the law, entered the Baptist ministry, and from 1832 till his death was pastor of the Amity Church (at first in Amity Street, about 1865 transferred to West Fifty-fourth Street). He was a trustee of Columbia College, 1838-48. He was a man of great learning, and famous for his eloquence, although his congregation was latterly very small, for his voice was too weak to fill a large church. He had a library of some twenty thousand volumes. He was the author of Miscellanies, New York, 1850, 3d ed. Boston, 1860; Religious Progress: Discourses on the Development of Christian Character, New York, 1850; Lectures on the Lord's Prayer, 1851, new ed. 1878; God's Rescues; or, the Lost Sheep, the Lost Coin, and the Lost Son, 1871; Lectures on Baptist History, Philadelphia, 1877; Eras and Characters of History, 1882; numerous discourses (among them the memorable address upon The Conservative Principle in Our Literature, delivered at Hamilton, N.Y., June 13, 1833, reprinted in Glasgow, and pronounced the greatest of his productions); articles, etc. *

ZUNZ, Leopold, Ph.D., Hebrew; b. at Detmold, Germany, Aug. 10, 1794; d. at Berlin, March 21, 1886. He was educated at the University of Berlin; became rabbi to the new synagogue there, 1820, but retired after two years, and started a society for Jewish culture and science, to which Heinrich Heine belonged. But the society, which was nicknamed "Young Jerusalem," although embracing many men of talent, soon broke up, perhaps because of Zunz's radicalism. Many of its members became Christians. From 1824 to 1832, Zunz was director of the New Jewish Congregational School. From 1825 to 1835 he edited the Spener'sche Zeitung. From 1835 to 1839, at Prague, he again undertook ministerial functions. From 1839 to 1850 he was director of the Normal Seminary in Berlin. Since 1845 he was a member of the Board of Commissioners for the educational interests of the Jews in Prussia. His long life was one of great literary activity. His works are distinguished by learning and by beauty and clearness of style. Among them may be mentioned, Etwas über die rabbinische Litteratur, Berlin, 1818 (which first brought him into notice); Predigten, 1823, 2d ed. 1846; Die gottesdienstlichen Vorträge der Juden, historisch entwickelt, 1832 (his most valuable book); Namen der Juden, Leipzig, 1837; Zeittafel über die gesammte heilige Schrift, Berlin, 1839; Zur Geschichte und Literatur, Bd. 1., 1845; Damaskus, ein Wort zu Abwehr, 2d ed. 1859; Die synagogale Poesie des Mittelalters, 1855-59, 2 parts; Die Vorschriften über Eidesleistung der Juden, 1859; Wahlrede, 1861; *2. IMMER, Heinrich Albert, D.D. (Basel, 1860), Swiss Reformed theologian; b. at Unterseen, Aug. 10, 1804; d. at Bern, March 23, 1884. His father was pastor of Unterseen, Canton Bern. There was a clumsiness about him which his father mistook for stupidity, and severely punished. The effect of such treatment was to retard his mental development. He learned bookbinding at Lausanne and Zürich, and began business at Thun; but the reading, in 1834, of Schleiermacher's

Reden über die Religion so powerfully moved him, that he determined to study theology. He entered, after a brilliant examination, the University of Bern in 1835, passed his theological examination in 1838, and continued his studies at Bonn and Berlin 1838-40. He then returned home, became a pastor, and, after ten years' service, became professor extraordinary of theology at Bern 1850, ordinary professor of New-Testament exegesis and of theology there 1856, and so remained until his retirement as professor emeritus in 1881. He exerted a great and wide influence. He was the author of Schleiermacher als religiöser Character (lecture), Bern, 1859; Der Unsterblichkeitsglaube im Lichte der Geschichte und der gegenwärtigen Wissenschaft (lecture), 1868; Der Conflict zwischen dem Staatskirchentum und dem methodistischen Dissentertum im Jahr 1829 in Bern, 1870 (pp. 71); John Bunyan, Basel, 1871; Die Geschichtsquellen des Lebens Jesu (lecture, pp. 29), Leipzig, 1873; Hermeneutik des neuen Testaments, Wittenberg, 1873 (English trans. with additional notes, by Prof. A. H. Newman, Hermeneutics of the New Testament, Andover, 1877); Neutestamentliche Theologie, Bern, 1878. Cf. sketch by R. Rüetschi in Meili's Theologische Zeitschrift aus der Schweiz, vol. i. (St. Gallen, 1884), pp. 359-362. *

SEYERLEN, K. R., repetent in the theological seminary at Tübingen, 1859-61.

SHAFTESBURY, Earl of, was educated at Harrow School; was an ecclesiastical commissioner from 1841 to 1847. His first public philanthropic effort was in 1833, when he introduced in the House of Commons a bill limiting the hours of children's labor in factories to ten a day. It was defeated; but a Government bill enjoining that with the exception of silk and lace mills, no children under nine were to be employed in the factories, while those under thirteen were to work not more than forty-eight hours a week, and were to receive from their employers at least two hours schooling a week, was carried. But it proved so imperfect and ineffective, that in 1838 he introduced another bill on the subject. This the Government also opposed. The outcome of the agitation was, however, that in 1850 he carried his point; and in 1853 Lord Palmerston gave the measure its present shape, viz., that children between eight and thirteen years of age must not be employed more than six hours and a half daily, or ten hours on alternate days, while those of tender years must do their work between ten and six o'clock. In 1840 he secured a royal commission to inquire into the condition of the children not protected by the Factory Act, e.g., those in mines; and, on the strength of its revelations, introduced two bills in 1842, one removing female children from the mines and collieries, and the other providing for the care and education of children in calico-print works. In 1844 he founded the Ragged School Union in London, which has done so much for the outcast children there. In 1864 he introduced in Parliament measures which ultimately led to the prohibition of chimney-sweeping by boys, and the compulsory employment of machines for the purpose. He was in 1834 one of the founders of the London City Mission; and in 1842, of a society for the construction of model lodging-houses. He was president of the British and Foreign Bible Society from 1851 till his death, as also of the Young Men's Christian Association. He was largely instrumental in reforming the treatment of lunatics. He did much to elevate the costermonger class. But it would be impossible to estimate the good he did in the course of his long and active life. He was connected with nearly three hundred religious societies, and with many other philanthropic institutions. In 1884 the freedom of the City of London was presented to him. The secret of his success was his humble piety. For a full account of his extraordinary usefulness, see EDWIN HODDER: The Life and Work of the Seventh Earl of Shaftesbury, K.G., London, 1886, 3 vols.

STEVENS, A., hon. A.M. (Brown University). STEVENS, W. B., practised as a physician in Savannah, Ga., 1838-43.

STEVENSON, WILLIAM FLEMING, D.D. (University of Edinburgh, 1881); b. in Strabane, County Tyrone, Ireland, Sept. 20, 1832; d. at Rathgar, Dublin, Ireland, Sept. 16, 1886. He was of that Ulster Presbyterian stock, which has given a special character to the northern province of Ireland. He graduated M.A. at the University of Glasgow, and finished his theological studies in Scotland and Germany. Occasional passages in his writings show that while interested in the speculative and critical sides of German theology, it was the warm, spiritual, Christian life of Germany, as displayed in German hymns and missions, which attracted him most. In 1856 he was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Strabane, became town missionary, and worked in the fever-stricken lanes of the poor part of Belfast. In 1860 he accepted the call of the newly organized Rathgar-road Presbyterian Church, situated in a suburb of Dublin. Mr. Stevenson was the first minister of this church, and it was his first and only regular charge. On the 2d of February, 1862, the present church building was dedicated, Dr. Norman McLeod preaching the opening sermon. Literary work, especially about this time, occupied much of Mr. Stevenson's attention. His contributions to Good Words, Dr. McLeod's periodical, were numerous, and dealt largely with the heart-life and practical Christianity of Germany. Praying and Working, London, 1862, is of interest to the student of social problems, as well as to the friends of missions. Lives and Deeds worth knowing, New York, 1870, composed of collected articles, and published without authority, is not less interesting. Hymns for Church and Home, London, 1873, has a scholarly accuracy and thoroughness which make it very valuable to hymnologists.

In 1871 Mr. Stevenson was called to the work which, in some sense, was the most important of his life, for in that year he became co-adjutor with Rev. Dr. James Morgan, the convener of the Assembly's Foreign Mission; and in 1873 he became sole convener, while retaining the pastorate of his church. Successful as a preacher and a pastor, he seemed even better fitted for this new work, which he had assumed with great diffidence. In 1873 he visited America on the occasion of the meeting of the Evangelical Alliance in New York. In 1877 he undertook a journey round the world, in the interests of missions; some papers from his pen appeared on the subject of this journey, in Good Words. In 1881 he was unanimously chosen as moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland, which met in Dublin. Of course many offers came to him from fields of work wider than the comparatively narrow one of Irish Presbyterianism; but he simply could not leave his beloved people. His life had now been carried on for many years, under the highest pressure from his double duties as a pastor, and as an organizer and administrator of mission-work. His death, hastened by overwork, occurred suddenly, painlessly, and almost without warning, from heart-disease, in the full tide of his activity. As a pulpit orator, Dr. Stevenson belonged to the first class. His writings give a good idea of his pulpit style. His broadly tolerant spirit won the victory over even Irish party feeling, which runs almost as high in matters ecclesiastical as political. He was a member of the Senate of the Royal University; and his appointment as chaplain to the vice-regal court, under Lord Aberdeen's administration, was regarded as marking a change in the attitude of the government towards Presbyterianism, as the attendance at his funeral of the clergy and highest dignitaries of the Episcopal and other churches, was regarded as an indication of the beginning of a better relation between the branches of the Church Catholic in Ireland than has existed in the past.

TALMAGE, Thomas De Witt, D.D., Presbyterian; b. near Bound Brook, N. J., Jan. 7, 1832; graduated at the University of the City of New York 1853, and at the New Brunswick (Reformed Dutch) Theological Seminary, N. J., 1856; became pastor of the Reformed-Dutch Church at Belleville, N. J., 1856; Syracuse, N. Y., 1859; Second Church, Philadelphia, Penn., 1862; Central Presbyterian Church, Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., 1869. In 1870 the congregation erected on the same street, near the old site, a new and much larger church, known as the "Tabernacle." It was burnt Dec. 22, 1872; rebuilt, 1873; dedicated Feb. 22, 1874. The new tabernacle seats some five thousand persons; the church has now in 1886 three thousand three hundred and eleven communicants. Dr. Talmage edited The Christian at Work, New York, 1873-76; The Advance of Chicago, in 1877 and 1878; and now edits Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine. His sermons are published every week in all the countries of Christendom, and translated into Norwegian, Russian, German, French, and Italian. Over six hundred secular and religious papers each week publish them entire, and thousands furnish synopses. Of the volumes made up of his sermons, lectures, essays, etc., may be mentioned, beside foreign publications, seven volumes of sermons, Crumbs Swept Up, Abominations of Modern Society, Shots at Targets, Around the Tea-Table, Night Side of New York, Mask Torn Off, The Marriage Ring, The Battle for Bread, Orange-Blossoms Frosted. (Substituted by Dr. Talmage for the sketch upon p. 214.)

WAGENMANN, J. A., D.D. (1862), editor of the Jahrbücher f. deutsche Theologie, 1862-78; wrote articles in Herzog and Allg. deutsche Biographie.

WALDENSTRÖM, P. P. "On the Meaning of the Atonement" (Om försoningens Betydelse, Stockholm, 1873, reprinted Chicago, Ill., U.S.A.). A sermon preached in 1872 first gave impetus to the theological movement with which he is identified, and the book was written to defend and explain his views which had attracted so much attention. He prefers to put his distinctive teaching thus: Non per gratiam propter Christo propitiatorem, sed propter gratiam per Christum mediatorem, redemptorem. He is commonly accused in Sweden of denying the divinity of Christ; but this is a slander, for just the contrary is the case. In his translation of the New Testament, he accepts and defends the reading ὁ μονογενὴς θεὸς in John i. 18.

WANAMAKER, John, Presbyterian layman; b. in Philadelphia, Penn., in the year 1838; received a common-school education, and early went into business. After being a clerk for a while in the year 1861, he started in the clothing business on his own account. He subsequently enlarged and altered his business, until now he is the owner of one of the largest retail stores in the United States, employs some three thousand persons, and is known throughout the country. He has displayed similar energy in Christian work. He started, in 1858, a Sunday school over a shoemaker's shop in the south-western part of Philadelphia, out of which has grown Bethany Presbyterian Church, with a seating capacity of 1,800, and Bethany Sunday School, numbering in 1886 2971 members. He was one of the founders of the Christian Commission; president of the Young Men's Christian Association of Philadelphia from 1870 to 1883; and has been prominent in many other Christian enterprises. He was chairman of the Bureau of Revenue and of the Press Committee, which did such efficient service in starting the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia in 1876.

Approved by Mr. Wanamaker.

WILLIAMS, William R. Mr. Mornay Williams, his son, sends this additional information: "Dr. Williams had no middle name; the initial 'R' having been assumed by him, in early life, because of the annoying mistakes constantly arising from the simple appellation William Williams. He was ordained and installed as pastor of the Amity Baptist Church on the same evening on which the church itself was recognized, Dec. 17, 1832, remaining pastor to the time of his death, never having had another charge, nor his people another pastor. He was the first secretary of the American Baptist Home Missionary Society (1832); the first secretary, and one of the draughters, of the constitution of the Baptist Ministers' Conference, in January, 1833; for many years a member of the board of trustees of Rochester Theological Seminary, in the formation of which, as also of the University of Rochester (both established in 1850), he was actively concerned. He was also for many years on the publishing committee of the American Tract Society, and in that position corrected the proofs of their foreign publications (viz., French, German, Italian, and Spanish); he was one of the vice-presidents of that society, as also of the American Bible Society. He wrote the introduction to [the American reprint of John] Harris's Great Commission; or, the Christian Church constituted and charged to convey the Gospel to the World, Boston, 1842; to that of Miss Grigg's Jacqueline Pascal, or Convent Life at Port Royal, New York, 1854; and to [W. W.] Everts's William Colgate: a Christian Layman, Philadelphia, 1881. His Religious Progress, and Lectures on the Lord's Prayer, were both republished in Scotland [in one volume, Edinburgh and London, 1851]."
