FOREWORD

WHEN a state of war was declared in April, 1917, the unrest prevalent throughout the country manifested itself in intensified form on the campus of every college for men. At Davidson about eighty students were excused from the completion of their spring work to help in food production at their homes.

Between April 1, 1917, and September 1, 1918, one hundred and fifty-eight students went into service; fifty-five of these were in the two Senior classes of the period.

In the summer of 1918, at the request of the War Department, four professors and thirty-three students went from Davidson to the training camp at Plattsburg, New York, to receive instruction which would fit them for assisting in teaching military science. The change of conditions in France and the resolve of the Government, as shown by the passage of the man-power bill, to throw the weight of America into the war at once, made it seem the necessary and patriotic thing to offer the college for the housing and training of one of the 550 Students' Army Training Corps.

All the men eighteen years old or over, who registered on September 12, and who were physically fit and prepared for college work, took the oath of allegiance and became regular members of the Students' Army Training Corps. This impressive ceremony took place south of Shearer Hall, at noon of October 1. The student-soldiers, numbering two hundred and twenty-three, were barracked in three dormitories: Watts, Rumble, and Georgia. All classes were abolished and the companies were formed on the basis of age.

Scarcely had the organization been completed when the prevailing epidemic of Spanish influenza reached Davidson. The south wing of Chambers dormitory was made into an improvised hospital for the two hundred and fifty and more victims. One death resulted from the visitation and all exercises were suspended for three weeks.

After the Armistice was signed the incentive to work disappeared. The unit was demobilized on December 10, 1918, after about seven weeks of actual work, half of this time being taken up with adjustments, physical examinations, etc. The work of President Martin, of the Faculty, and the officers of administration, was greatly increased during the period in which the Students' Army Training Corps was in existence. Schemes of study and details of discipline had to be reshaped. Classes were shifted, the curriculum remodeled, and the teachers worked as industriously as the men in the trenches.

As far as can be ascertained at this time 736 students and alumni entered the service, not including the 223 members of the Students' Army Training Corps. Of this number (959) twenty made the supreme sacrifice in battle or in camp hospitals, and 368 were commissioned officers.

OUR DEAD

“These laid the world away ; poured out the red
Sweet wine of youth ; gave up the years to be
Of work and joy, and that unhopéd serene
That men call age ; and those who would have been
Their sons, they gave, their immortality.

* * * * *

These hearts were woven of human joys and cares,
Washed marvellously with sorrow, swift to mirth.
The years had given them kindness. Dawn was theirs,
And sunset and the colours of the earth.
These had seen movement, and heard music ; known
Slumber and waking ; loved ; gone proudly friended ;
Felt the quick stir of wonder. * * * * *

All this is ended.”

MEMORIAL SERVICE

In the late afternoon of May 27, 1919, with relatives of those we sought to honor, the faculty and students, trustees and commencement visitors, gathered in the Presbyterian Church at Davidson to show affection for and do reverence to the twenty Davidson College Alumni who had given their lives in the European War—dying in battle lines or in American camps.

The service flag of their Alma Mater was draped over the pulpit and a wreath of laurel encircled the gold stars thereon.

Prayer and song added tenderness to the hour.

Reverend Charles Malone Richards, 1892, read the names and class numerals of our beloved and heroic dead.

Reverend William Talliaferro Thompson, 1905, delivered the memorial tribute of which only a brief can be obtained. Dr. Thompson began by repeating —

THE SPIRES OF OXFORD

“I saw the spires of Oxford
As I was passing by.
The grey spires of Oxford
Against a pearl-gray sky.
My heart was with the Oxford men
Who went abroad to die.

The years go fast in Oxford,
The golden years and gay.
The hoary colleges look down
On careless boys at play.
But when the bugles sounded war
They put their games away.

They left the peaceful river,
The cricket-field, the quad,
The shaven lawns of Oxford,
To seek a bloody sod—
They gave their merry youth away
For country and for God.

God rest you, happy gentlemen,
Who laid your good lives down;
Who took the khaki and the gun
Instead of cap and gown.
God bring you to a fairer place
Than even Oxford town."

This was followed by a statement of the fact that the English college men meant much to Britain throughout the war, and that the American college men were equally as generous with their lives. Particularly was this true of our college, so that there is a corner of a foreign field that is forever Davidson.

These men who gave their lives we do not think of as lost.

" 'Tis man's perdition to be safe
When for the truth he ought to die."

Nor do we think of them as dead. Browning desired his friends to think of him as just away and more alive than ever. This is the picture we have of them. Not because we have accepted any cheap theology and believe that death on the battlefield is the initiatory rite to heaven; but because we feel that with the rearing these men had at home, and the training that was theirs at college, the danger they faced, the hardship and agony they experienced as they served, must have led them to know the Great Sufferer for mankind, even Jesus, whom to know aright is life eternal.

We most assuredly do not think of their death as useless. Unquestionably the immediate consequence of the valor and sacrifice of the American troops was the triumph of the Allies. The world turned around at Chateau Thierry and the pivot on which it turned was the standard of our soldiers. Our men undeniably saved the day for civilization.

But more than that, they revealed to us in America the realities of life, through the strain and stress that was upon us as a result of their presence in Europe linking us to the war. We began to understand that things were not all, that justice, truth, righteousness, mercy, God, were the essentials of life.

Further than this they showed us what is in man, exhibiting a courage, a modesty, and an unselfishness that has lifted our idea of the possibilities of the human race. "The greatest gift a hero leaves the race is to have been a hero."

Finally, they have challenged those of us who remain to service by their own efforts and sacrifice, and by their manifestation of the fact that men have capacity for finer things if they are but granted the chance. Mr. Wilson said recently, "Once more in the providence of God, America is being given the opportunity to show the world that she is born to serve mankind." In the providence of God, this group of men, represented by the cluster of stars that death has kissed to gold, calls us to possess ourselves of this opportunity to serve our fellowmen, that righteousness and peace may so prevail throughout the earth that even the lowest and feeblest may be free and happy. It is only as we hear and follow that their death will not have been in vain. They call us by their death. Can we fail them who did not fail us?

At memorial services held on Armistice Day, 1920, Professor Joseph Moore McConnell, 1899, of the Davidson College Faculty, said in part:

Why did they die, those patriotic sons of Davidson? Those of us here who had taught them remember with what buoyant hearts and high devotion our college students volunteered at their country's call. There was no shouting or tumult, no flaring of trumpets, none of the pomp and circumstance of war connected with their going, but with firm resolve, they gave up their preparation for life, slipped away to camp and field and began that grueling routine that was to fit them for the life and work of a soldier. Occasionally, during the weeks and months of training, they would drop in to see us, spend a few hours on the campus shaking hands with friends and then would be out and gone, frequently to some port of embarkation and thence over the sea to the fields of France. We remember how their faces were fairly aglow as their hearts burned with the desire to be in the thick of the fight, to make their contribution. The fight for what? The fight to overthrow despotism, misrule, injustice and oppression throughout the whole wide world. No crusader of the middle ages ever took the cross with a higher, nobler purpose than that shown by our college boys as they bade good-bye to friends and crossed the seas to crush the power of military despotism, to set free the peoples of all lands. Truly, the sons of the new world, nurtured in the home of freedom, were returning in filial love to bring a votive offering of peace and liberty to the parent peoples of the old world. And we do ourselves honor today when we honor their memory, made precious and dear to all mankind by their heroic sacrifice.

“When a deed is done for freedom, through the broad earth’s aching breast
Runs a thrill of joy prophetic, trembling on from East to West.
And the slave where’er he cowers, feels the soul within him climb
To the awful verge of manhood, as the energy sublime
Of a century bursts full-blossomed on the thorny stem of time.
Through the wall of hut and palace shouts the instan-taneous throe,
When the travail of the ages wrings earth’s systems to and fro;
At the birth of each new era with a recognizing start,
Nation wildly looks at nation standing with mute lips
apart,
And the glad truth’s yet mightier man-child leaps beneath the future’s heart.”

What was the result of these "deeds done for freedom" by our heroic dead? In truth a new era in the history of the human race has been ushered in, an era of new hope to men, new rights, new ambitions, new opportunities—in fact a new world order. The shot fired at Lexington has indeed been "heard around the world"—Cantigny, Chateau-Thierry, Belleau-Wood, the Argonne are other Lexingtons. And today throughout all lands a new sense of freedom and individual rights, and a new hope of future world peace, are stirring in the hearts of peoples formerly oppressed by autocratic and militaristic governments. This great boon to mankind, not yet fully realized, but in the making, is the gift to the world of the 40,000 or more American boys (and we are proud of the Davidson men among them) who rest beneath the soil of France; and also of the other thousands who succumbed to disease or accident while in training camp, and who sleep here in the homeland. We are grateful and happy to think that they did not die in vain. Their sacrifice was, as it were, an atonement for the inhumanity of the Turk, the cruel injustice of the Hapsburg, the militarism of the Hohenzollern, and the stupid oppression of the Romanoffs. And these boys of ours, having paid the price with their lives, the peoples of the Turkish Empire are today liberated from the barbarous misrule of the fanatical followers of Islam, the nations of Austria and Germany, though suffering for the present, have been regenerated, and the Russians, for the time confused and delirious in the possession of a new and unfamiliar freedom, are groping toward a new light. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." Our boys gave their lives not only for their friends, nor for their country alone, but for the whole world. Through their sacrifice, Asia, Africa and Europe, yea, the world, have learned the lesson of American freedom.

BETHINCOURT

(Lines in memory of First Lieutenant Charles D. Montgomery, Jr., 1909, and published in Memorials of Dixie Land, by Lucian Lamar Knight).

Aye, worthy of the kings of old
Who wielded combat's lance,
Those boys of ours whose hearts of gold,
Sleep in the dust of France.

One face among them I recall—
A mirror true to truth;
Peer of the knightliest of them all
Was this immortal youth.

Cradled among our Georgia pines,
None braver on the plain,
E'er graced Napoleon's battle lines
Or marched with Charlemagne.

Like yonder bird of ether bold
Upon her mountain nest,
France, to a mother's heart will fold
This eaglet on her breast.

Through burning Argonne's fiery hell,
O'er glorious St. Mihiel,
"To sound oppressions' funeral knell,"—
Was mottoed on his shield.

Nor marvel if a prince he stood
Amid war's withering flames,
He joined to Scotia's highland blood
One of her grand old names.

Montgomery's castle on the heights,
His proud ancestral shrine,
Can boast among its sleeping knights,
None worthier of the line.

Victorious over freedom's foes,
On fields of old renown,
His spirit, like a rocket, rose
To clutch a martyr's crown.

Rest thee in peace, my gallant lad,
Though far from home you sleep;
God's own pure knight, Sir Galahad,
Will vigil o'er thee keep.

France, too, will consecrate the ground,
Her changeless stars above,
And, in the air, to wrap thee 'round,
Her lillies and her love.

ROSE STEVENSON

Loray, North Carolina.

Died, October, 1918.

Twenty-six years.

When volunteers were called for to help nurse student members of the S. A. T. C., at Davidson College, in October, 1918, Miss Stevenson responded. She contracted influenza while at Davidson. Pneumonia followed and she passed away on the day she was to have graduated at the Presbyterian Hospital, in Charlotte. She was the only sister of Thomas McLelland Stevenson, 1912.

“Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.”

SERVICE REGISTER

Beginning on the opposite page is a list of the graduates, under-graduates, and former students of Davidson College who served their country in the World War.

The list is probably incomplete. However, the fact that during the last six months not over twenty names were added makes us feel that the ground is fairly covered. No omission is intentional. The * * * indicate that the information given was received from newspapers. From the names so starred and from the names followed by a blank space, every effort was made to secure the needed information. Five direct appeals were sent to each man, and general requests were made through the college bulletins, The Davidsonian, and the Church and daily papers.

The names followed by * died while in service, and are duplicates of those given in the foregoing pages.

Thirty-five men were wounded and gassed. Two were members of the Legion of Honor, nine received the Distinguished Service Cross, six were awarded the Croix de Guerre, thirteen citations were given, and nine foreign medals and crosses were received. The information in this paragraph, compiled largely from newspapers and reports, is far from complete.
